END OF SEASON SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

The Hell With Democracy

Fascist, Illegal But Otherwise Excellent Ways To Keep Crowds Away From The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

There are just too many people in the Hamptons now. People say its too bad, but what can you do. This is America. People can go where they want.

Even I have taken this tack. In America you can go where you want. In Russia you need a permit. We better get used to it.

But this really is such a beautiful part of the world. There are so many bays, inlets, harbors, ponds, beaches and marshes. So many beautiful old New England villages, so many farms and fishing villages. It is, truly, one of the last, great places

Are we really stuck with this rule that people in America are just free to go anywhere? Where is it written? And if it is true, why are there two hour limits on where you can park? Or why is it, and there are lots of jammed up resort towns where this is so—such as Nantucket and Newport—where only residents are allowed to park on the streets downtown while visitors are not? Are we not all Americans?

And what about safety? Wasn't there a limit put on how many people could safely be put aboard the Titanic? Sorry ladies, we are full. Book next trip

In Greece, there is a single, ten mile long, two lane road that leads into the beach resort town of Monemvasia. I've been on it. On Fridays, it is one way heading toward Monemvasia. On Sundays it is one way heading away from Monemvasia. Plan ahead. And Greece is the cradle of democracy.

In other words, all of this has got me thinking. Here are some ideas.

1. Build another Hampton. And not out here, but to the west to discourage people from coming to OUR Hamptons. There is all this uninhabited land between Westhampton and Manorville. You (Continued on page 40)

A "ROCKEFELLER" CONS HAMPTONITES OUT OF $250,000

By Dan Rattiner

Many years ago in the Hamptons, the police would walk up and down the Main Streets of our little villages checking the front doors of the stores. If they found one open, they would call the owner, he would come down, and he would lock it. There weren't many burglars in the Hamptons in those days. And it probably was because there was not much of value to steal.

It's a whole lot different today. The treasures of the world are in our upscale chic Hamptons shops. Besides the police, most stores are defended at night with bars and grates, and with motion detectors and alarm systems tied right into police headquarters.

If there are the treasures of the world in these stores, of course, there has got to be those who can buy them. And if there are those who can buy them, there are going to be con artists. In the last few years we've had a few. Last week, we had another. And though the East Hampton Village Police caught him, he immediately posted $45,000, probably just a small part of the cash he had conned people out of here, and then fled. He's not been seen since.

It's a sad story. And it has a moral. Watch out. The perpetrator of all of this, allegedly, was a thirty one year old man with a French accent who claimed he was Christopher Rockefeller, a rich heir to the Rockefeller fortune. He and some of his entourage checked into the Mill Garth Inn in Amagansett, and also into the Pink House in East Hampton. That was in late July. Yes, it took people all this time to figure this out. He went about his interesting business until Saturday night, September 2. Turns out his name is Fabien Ortuno, and he lives in Ohio. Right now, though, police think he might be in Canada with about a quarter million dollars of other people's money.

Ortuno's con was very simple. He played tennis, went to the beach, ate at some of the chicest restaurants, was charming and generous, and always picked up the check, which he had his assistant, an older man with a cell phone who went with him everywhere, take care of, mostly by telling purveyors where to send the bill. Fortunately, he had some investments he was making he was willing to share.

"I'm doing this deal and putting up $6 million," he told Nancy Lorenzen of East Hampton and Aspen, a divorcee he met working out at the East Hampton Gym. "Would you like to put up $100,000?"

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Sean Puffy Combs' Labor Day party this year was a wonderful affair for about 150 people that included author Salman Rushdie, Dr. Dre and Moby but not girlfriend Jennifer Lopez who was reportedly off promoting her new movie The Cell. The party featured acrobats, angel winged waitresses, and bikini clad fire eaters and ended promptly at the time the permit for the event allowed which was a relief for the neighbors. Earlier in the weekend Puffy hosted a wonderful children's party - see our photo pages - raising approximately $500,000 for his children's charity.

The 2001 Subaru Forester S that was raffled off at the Montauk Village Association's fundraiser was won by playwrite Edward Albee of that town.

Paul McCartney, who recently bought a house in Amagansett, has been seen around town with his kids and girlfriend Heather Mills having a wonderful time.

Everyone knows that Billy Joel sold his oceanfront mansion in Amagansett to Jerry Seinfeld for about $40 million last year and supposedly left the Hamptons for greener pastures in Nassau County. After thinking about it though, he's apparently decided that maybe there's no place like the East End after all. Privacy was difficult on the dunes in Amagansett so now he's reportedly bought a beautiful house on twenty-nine acres of woods and fields in North Sea overlooking Peconic Bay. The reported cost for this much more secluded home was $14 million. Something went out of the Hamptons when he left, we're glad he's back if all this is true.

A group called the Boring Institute has named Hillary Clinton the most boring celebrity of the year, with Don Imus number two, Al Gore third, Jessie Ventura fourth, and Steve Forbes fifth. None live in the Hamptons.

Gary Glanz, Chairman of greenshoe.com is giving out milk and cookies to Hamptons Jitney passengers this Friday coming out and Sunday going back. It's a promotion of course, for Glanz' Southampton - based Internet Wireless Payment Company. The cookies are chocolate chip and come from Kathleen King's Tate cookie company and the milk is from Hampton Dairy. There's also a leaflet describing Greenshoe. Glanz says he's taking the milkrochip route.

OVER HEARD AT THE BEACH

Shift Change

The Day Shift Leaves And The Evening Shift Arrives At Sagaponack Beach

By Dan Rattiner

Five o'clock in the evening brings a changing of the shift at the beach. It's kind of a rush hour. The bikini girls and young guys with cell phones pack up and go home. The lifeguards come down from their stand, put up a red flag and drag all their equipment up to the storage shack. The fathers, mothers and kids all go wearily back toward the parking lots.

The new shift arrives.

This includes surfcasters in old jeeps who drive out to the jetties, hoping that the authorities will forgive them the hour before four It includes people carrying huge ice chests containing beer and fried chicken wrapped in foil who will shortly begin to build a beach fire. And oddballs. People with metal detectors and earphones, listening for the static that will indicate a diamond necklace lost in the sand. People meditating in groups in the lotus position, either in rows facing the ocean (where God is) or in a circle (facing each other.) People walking their dogs. And me. I sit in a lawn chair and write at the beach on a laptop. I watch all these comings and goings. I'm part of the evening shift.

It's a wonderful thing that all our beaches, the very best of the Hamptons, are free and open to the public, thanks to an ancient colonial New York State law.

Last Friday evening, I arrived on the late side, about ten of six, and set up camp at Sagaponack Main Beach. There weren't too many people about, though about a half mile to the west, down by the cut, I could see a beach barbecue setting up. A few joggers went by. A woman with three dogs.

rude, though. And then I noticed that a wind had sprung up, blowing from me to them, and with the roar of the ocean, I could just tune them out. I started writing. This was not going to be a problem.

Ten minutes later, I was interrupted by the sound of what I at first thought was a helicopter. It was Friday night and they often come in along the beach from the west looking for our little > airport. This was from the west. Rich weekenders.

> As the moments passed, however, and the droning of whatever this was grew louder, its pitch changed all over the place. It grew labored for a moment, then stopped. Then there was a huge roar, followed by a long. whine. I looked up from what I was doing. Everyone was looking up from what they were doing. The intruder was a tiny red and white bi-plane, shiny in the late afternoon sun, and its pilot - I could not imagine that anyone else would want to be in there with him - having arrived over our beach, was taking this plane into an incredible stunt flying maneuver. He went straight up like a rocket, cut the gas, and the plane stopped and started moving silently backwards, back down toward the sea.

I briefly considered moving away. It seemed

Often things happen and you wheel drives are legal on the sand. don't know why. This is as good an explanation as any, I guess.

I was just beginning writing when something happened that I didn't particularly like. Two women and one man came out to the beach and, talking loudly, set up a beach blanket just ten feet from me. They had two large metal detectors, and at least one cell phone, and from the sound of things they were leading very busy lives. Certainly they could have set up farther away. We had the whole beach.

Then maybe just one hundred feet over the surf, he started the engine up again, accelerated quickly to top speed, and roared off in the direction from which he had come. Now he was gone and everyone started up again doing what they were doing before

About ten seconds later, however, off in the distance, the droning of the plane came once again. He was coming back. Again, everyone stopped what they were doing, braced themselves, and there he was, a tiny shiny red speck, quickly growing into a bi-plane headed right for us. People shifted uncomfortably.

And then he was here. This time, he went into a series of barrel rolls and began what I quickly recognized as something called the "box." He went straight up, made a ninety degree turn to make the top, then another ninety degree turn to make the side coming down, then another ninety degree turn to upside down make the bottom. Then he was off again.

It seemed to me that I knew this guy. A couple of years ago, I met Ian Grooms at the Dan's Papers office and he showed me pictures of his stunt biplane, and if I recall it had the same red and white markings on the wings. He was based at East Hampton Airport, taught stunt flying and offered to give me a ride for free if I would write about it. I thanked him profusely. Maybe another time, I said. When hell freezes over, is what I thought. I am terrified of heights. Now, apparently, he was back.

And there he was again, a speck off to the west, heading toward us, getting louder and louder, just a hundred yards or so over the beach, and I could look around me and see people moving nervously again — maybe this was some kind of lunatic, maybe he was going to crash right into us.

But no. Just as he arrived over the beach, he went into a climb, then did a complete 180 degree turn to head back the way he came again. He didn't get very far. Suddenly, he seemed to lose all power. The plane began a barrel roll, then was spinning crazily, every which way, backwards, forwards, upside down, sideways — he was going to crash — and everyone on the beach gasped, until, at the very last minute, he made an incredible recovery and went, on a straight line, one hundred yards over the surf, back again to the west and out of sight still again.

For awhile, nobody spoke. Would he come back? Nobody moved. We waited. We waited a very long time. We wanted him to come back very much, now. He didn't come. It was over.

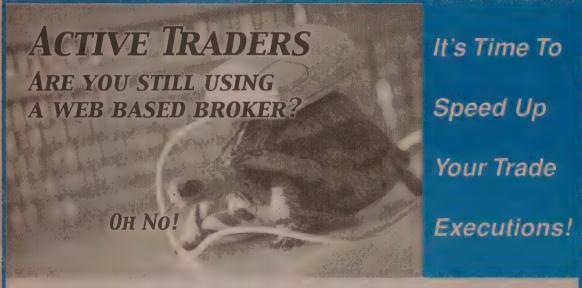

But what was it? My first thought was that someone with a beachfront house had hired Grooms to do a driveby and perform some stunts. Ira Rennert? Well, his $50 million house, the biggest in America, is still under construction to the east of where we were and the plane never got that far. Right here? There are no great, flamboyant homes and billionaires right here who might hire this guy to do such a thing. I had a crazy thought. He had seen me. And he remembered three years ago. Completely crazy.

And then it occurred to me that what I was seeing was pure exuberance. Over at the East Hampton Airport, and at the airport in Westhampton Beach, some company that sells and leases million dollar corporate jets was holding — how shall I put this — an airplane show. Big Cessnas and Bells and Lear Jets were flying in from all over that Friday night, and they would have their doors open and the red carpets out so that various well to do people could kick the tires, wiggle the steering gear and see if a particular plane was something they might like to purchase.

Ever see how a puppy behaves when three or four big dogs arrive on the scene? It was Friday night, and all the big dogs were arriving one by one at the airport. The puppy, filled with excitement, was up and flying around.

Often things happen and you don't know why. This is as good an explanation as any, I guess. But I'm going to give this guy a call. If I can find him. I'll start by going down to the airport.

The above was written Friday, August 25. That weekend all the big new private planes were at the airport. On Sunday, September 16, lots of antique planes, antique cars and even more corporate jets will be at the East Hampton airport for an event called "Just Plane Fun." Will Ian turn up again over the ocean?

A Dead Heat At The Polls And The Shocking Scandal That Got Them That Way

By Dan Rattiner

Did you notice? Last week, the polls showed a dead heat in the Presidential race. It also showed a dead heat in the Hillary-Lazio race. Every comment by a candidate would shift the lead first one way and then the other. There are only sixty more days to go. It was as if the candidates got up in the morning, went off on their appointed rounds and at the end of the day came back to their spin doctors and marketing firms and nervously asked - how did I make out?

Well, fortunately, we have a video tape of one of these meetings with the spin doctors. Remember, you read it first in Dan's Papers.

Ten men in suits sit around a table. A door opens, and Al and

"We told you not to talk again about how you invented the internet," one of the suits says.

"You said I should get specific. Give specific and detailed information about my proposals." "Let's hear."

"As President I will authorize $56 billion for the creation of an environmental cabinet level post that will make available all environmental data worldwide on the internet...'

"Good."

"... which I founded on September 24, 1953." "No. No."

"That cost two and a half points today," another suit says. "And stop making those chopping motions with your hand. Loosen up. Kiss Tipper.'

Gore grabs Tipper, leans her over backwards, and gives her a big juicy kiss. They finish. Gore looks up.

"... at two o'clock in the afternoon," Gore says.

Lieberman says.

"Well, believe there is a separation between church and state. And it could cost you the election."

"Some people say they appreciate it," Hadassah

"It's right there on the penny," Lieberman says, fishing one out of his pocket. "In God we Trust."

"Why are you giving us an argument? Bring in Cheney."

> The Liebermans leave. Dick Cheney comes in.

"You were talking out of the side of your mouth again today," a suit says.

"No I wasn't."

"There. You're doing it again. You're a real wiseass when you do that. Say pretty purple poseys.'

"Pretty purple poseys."

"It's impossible to say that out of the side of your mouth like you are doing. I don't believe it."

"I can't help it."

"Where's that speech guy? Room 217? Get Cheney down there for another session. Now."

Cheney leaves. Hillary comes in. "So you're on the telephone, doing an interview with a radio station in Erie, and you keep telling all the listeners how great Erie is, and it's Erie,

"The smile is great. You gained three points... And we love the moralizing. But Tipper Gore come in. They stand Stop with the God business."

> "Get him out of here," a suit says. "Bring in Lieberman.'

Gore and Tipper leave. Lieberman and Hadassah come in.

"The smile is great," a suit says. "You gained three points in Indianapolis with it. And we love the moralizing. But stop with the God business. Enough already.'

"It's hard when you believe in something,"

Pennsylvania. Do you know what that cost you?" "What?" Hillary asks.

"You have got, you have got to hit those geography books again, Hil. Every town in the state. Every county. Memorize, memorize, memorize, "

"Some of those upstate towns are in Dutch."

"You're gonna lose it, Hil. You're gonna lose it. And read this. It shows Lazio's changing his senate votes. First one side, then the other. Bang at it. Say this. Whiffle Waffle."

"Whiffle waffle."

"Good. We did a marketing test. Whiffle waffle will get you up a point and a half. Try it tomorrow."

"Where's George W? Can we get him in here?" Hillary leaves. George W. comes in.

"You did very well today. Four speeches. No mistakes. You went up a quarter point."

"How did that grainy video tape of Al talking about the Internet go over?" George W. asks.

"Excellent. But keep working with the mirror. You've started talking out of the side of your mouth again."

"It's that damn Cheney."

"Stay away from him."

"He keeps asking me to play cards."

"Stay away from him."

George W. leaves. Lazio comes in. Big grin on his face.

"You are doing an excellent job. Keep banging away about how Hillary is not from New York."

"Her mother wears combat boots."

"There you go."

"Her father is a redneck."

"She's from Chicago, Rick. The windy city."

"Her father passes a lot of wind."

"No. No. Listen. We've got to get you out of that suit and tie."

"But it's working."

"Tie's too narrow. Jacket too snug. You look like a Senate page. Or a choir boy."

"I am a choir boy."

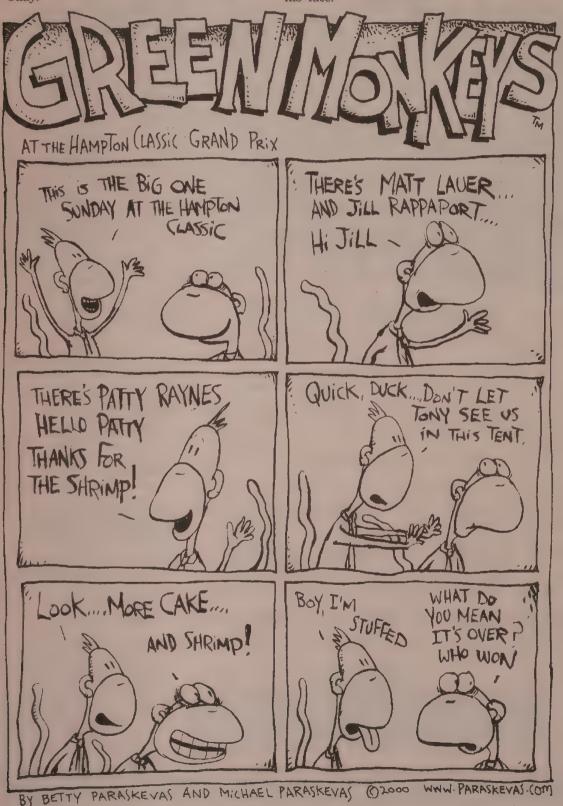

"Just for tomorrow. It'll be subtle. You're mowing your lawn. You invite the media over. You're wearing a T-shirt. Sweat pants. You've just come back from working out. You're hot and sweaty. The T-shirt says I LOVE NY."

Another suit interrupts. "We're changing that. It says I'M FROM NY."

"Okay," Lazio shrugs.

Lazio leaves.

"Okay, new business," one of the suits says, thumping a sheaf of paper onto the table. "We've landed Alexandr Putin."

Two Attempts To Take The Shelter Island Ferry When There Is None

By Dan Rattiner

There are two ways to get to Shelter Island. Both are by ferry. From Sag Harbor, you drive down the appropriately named Ferry Road, come to a stop at the water's edge, and then wait for the ferryman to wave you on board From the North, you go down Third Street in downtown Greenport and wait to be waved aboard an entirely different ferry for the crossing.

Both ferries are adorable, carry passengers and up to a dozen cars and will take you across to the Island in about ten minutes. And both ferries run at about ten minute intervals, which means if you do the math, there are at least two and sometimes three ferries going back and forth at one time.

It is fair to say that the ferries set the tone for the island. The island is small, quiet, and has very few cars. How many cars can you get over there at any one time after all? It is also fair to get there. And then, of course, get back off. to say that since - other than flying - there is no other way on and off the island, everybody is taking them and are happy to do so. One way brings you to peace and quiet. The other way

I know at least two millionaires with waterfront spreads who have at one time or

A BARN MOVED I

By Dan Rattiner

The late Charlie Vanderveer was a giant of a man, six foot six and two hundred and fifty pounds. He owned a farm on Scuttlehole Road most of his adult life, raising potatoes among other things, but his real passion was being an auctioneer. For many years, he ran estate auctions for people, putting up for sale everything from antique Queen Anne chairs to collections of depression glass. One year, he auctioned off a ten year collection of the English magazine Country Squire. He had them around the house for awhile before the auction and he read them. Fascinated, he obtained a subscription.

Charlie may have been a big and intimidating fellow, but he was also gentle and quiet. What might have made others angry only annoyed him. He had a great sense of humor.

One group in particular that annoyed him, however, was the Ladies Village Improvement Society in East Hampton. They gave him a hard time about one of his auctions and he never forgot it. They reminded him of their heritage. Theirs went back to the 1630s. Charlie's only went back to when New York City was the Dutch colony of New Amsterdam. This was about 1705.

As a result of this, one day, Charlie decided to buy an old English barn he saw for sale in Country Squire magazine. It was in the English farm section known as Surrey. And it was a barn built in 1345. He'd have it barged across the Atlantic and set up on his property off Scuttlehole Road. Now the LVIS would think twice about whose heritage was

I never did find out why the barn he bought never made it across the Atlantic. I recall him talking about something with the Department of Agriculture and the importation of a European beetle. Or maybe it was the long arm of the LVIS.

In any case, the events of last week involving a barn in Mecox reminded me of Charlie. He would have loved this story.

Lorenzen later told police she did not take the bait. She was put off by the French accent. What Rockefeller has a French accent? Also, he took her to play tennis. But at the public court in Herrick Park. Where was his club?

"But he had at least half a million dollars worth of jewelry on his wrists," Lorenzen said.

Not so fortunate was Corine Eeltink, a working woman from Holland here for the summer. "Rockefeller" told her he could increase whatever money she gave him tenfold in sixty days. He dropped names such as the Sultan of Brunei and the Prince of Belgium. She gave him fifteen thousand dollars.

Another person taken in was Kevin McCrarey, son of marketing and radio pioneer Tex McCrarey and actress Jinx Falkenburg. He alerted the police. And he's been asked by the police not to talk about it, a request, he says, he is honoring.

Another man who got conned was a New York City investment banker, who for obvious reasons asked that his name not be used. "Rockefeller" took eleven people, including him out to NV Tsunami in East Hampton for dinner. They had drunk about $9,000 worth of Dom Perignon at which point the banker mentioned he was in a jam and needed a loan of half a million dollars.

"Rockefeller" pounced. He'd lend the half million right away at low interest. He gave the banker the number of a Swiss account. All he'd need was the first month's loan payment, $50,000, to show good faith, and then he'd wire the half million right over. The banker ordered the transfer.

How "Rockefeller" got caught was that a prominent Southampton artist smelled a rat. "Rockefeller" had come by the artist's studio and said he would be interested in buying some paintings. He'd wire half a million dollars into the artist's account. All the artist had to do was give him his account numbers.

The artist, Gines Serran-Pagan, declined. And something was funny. "Rockefeller" said he had a duplex on Fifth and 57th. Then later it was on Fifth and 59th. He said he owned two jets. Later it wasn't two jets, it was two helicopters. Serran-Pagan decided to set "Rockefeller" up by inviting him back to the studio for a dinner party to meet other "investors." He'd turn the tables.

The night of this party was Saturday, September 2. And the "investors," those playing that role under Serran- Pagan's instruction were his friends. They included the aforementioned Kevin McCrarey (who already was beginning to suspect he'd been conned), electrical contractor Peter Fazio, photojournalist Natuko Utsumi and Maria Eftimaides, an editor for People magazine. Eftimaides pretended to be a Greek shipping heiress. Fazio pretended to be a wealthy art dealer. Utsumi pretended to be an heiress of the Sony fortune.

The dinner went off without a hitch. But "Rockefeller" apparently sensed something was wrong. Eventually, "Rockefeller," noting the hour was late, called a taxi to take one of the women who was with him back to his "house on Further Lane." Then, accompanied by his cell phone toting aide, he got into a limo and drove off. A minute later, McCrarey got on the telephone and phoned the cab company, identified himself, and asked where the cab was taking the two women. They told him the Mobil Station in Amagansett. McCrarey got in his car, got there just ahead of the taxi, and tailed the woman to the Mill Garth Inn. Then he called the police.

East Hampton Village Police arriving at the Mill Garth Inn, found the women, "Rockefeller" and making inquiries, determined that they had run up an $8,242 hotel tab. There was another hotel tab to pay at the Pink House, a Bed and Breakfast in East Hampton.

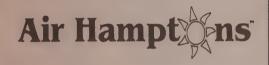

Arrested were Ortuno and a man named Dante Danello, who had posed as "Joseph," the aide to Christopher Rockefeller. Also picked up were a woman named Pia, believed to be Ortuno's wife, Laurent, a Frenchwoman, and a child believed to be Ortono's son.

Ortuno was represented in court by Bruce Cutler, the lawyer who also represents the John Gotti family. Cutler, realizing that the major fraud charges had not yet been filed and the only charges pending were misdomeaners – theft of services at restaurants and Inns, along with impersonation – got Ortuno freed on $45,000 bail. All of which was paid, many believe, with some of the money he stole. Ortuno then vanished.

According to the New York Post, which first broke this story, Cutler claims that surely his client will appear for his arraignment next week.

"He's not a fugitive so far as I am concerned," he told a reporter for that newspaper. "I keep it simple and right. A man comes to me for help. I show up. He gets bailed. I expect him to show up. It's a simple credo."

Question: Did Bruce Cutler get paid yet? •

Thanks for a great summer!
We look forward to flying with you in the beautiful fall and winter seasons.

Crusader Ralph Nader Talks About His Candidacy At Southampton College

By Janet Berg

On the way to Southampton Wednesday evening, I had a conversation with my husband about today's world of diminishing heroes. When I was a kid, a few of my heroes were Elvis Presley, Mickey Mantle, and Ralph Nader.

So, I found it bizarre that I was on my way to see one of them speak, not far from where I live, especially since he is now campaigning to be President of the United States. With a series of polls recently taken, support for Mr. Nader ranges from 2 to 6 percent nationally. "Well, he's still got it," I thought. I always loved the underdog.

About half way there, driving on Route 27 to watch Nader speak before hundreds in the Avram Fine Arts Theatre of Southampton College, my husband asked me, "What would you want to say to Ralph

"Well," I answered in a serious tone, "I would ask him, 'What do you have to bring to the table over Bore and Gush - I, I mean Gore and Bush," I corrected myself, after the "Freudian" slip. Then we laughed a lot on the rest of the drive to the college.

With the image of Ralph Nader and what he stands for, I was more than curious to see him in such a setting as "The Hamptons." Although, Mr. Nader has his own celebrity following: Paul Newman, Phil Donahue, Susan Sarandon, and rock stars such as Pearl Jam, Bonnie Raitt, and Willie Nelson; I still doubt he was invited to Puff Daddy's Hampton party. Somehow I can't picture him pulling up in a "restored" Corvair at the valet.

After Nader's meeting at the United Nations earlier (where he received a standing ovation), Mr. Nader hurried out east to the College. He was very late. I expected him to stand before us in On the radio, you get it in twenty seconds. a rumpled suit, totally exhausted, but he looked

And there he stood, in person, the man of truth, the man for the American people. He stepped up to the podium. "Phew," he sighed. (Every one stood and cheered). "Listen, I know why you're clapping (he motioned all to sit down). Anybody, who can make it out here to Long Island, deserves some applause. There's no such thing as 'the end.' Bumper to bumper traffic," he added.

Not exactly spelling out his own 'solutions' over

And, while you're waiting to hear about your area, they tell you about Minnesota and the Ohio Valley. And they tell you, 'twenty years ago - it was hotter."

"Did you know that, outside of Finland, we have the best communications in the world? And they all brag about being Silicon Valley companies that provide the new chips, and AT&T and world com and all... phone this and cell phone that...

"I remember when I had a phone in Winston, Connecticut, and here's how you dialed: You picked up the phone, the operator instantly said, 'Operator,' and you'd say '513' and a human being would answer. Try to get a human being today.

"A simple question on a bill? You may have been overcharged in a code you can't understand. They put you on hold; you're suppose to listen to music, or else there's ads.

"Late at night, when I need to relax, and I want to listen to classical music, I just dial 'United Airlines."

Mr. Nader also complained that kids aren't learning about what is "real" in schools, like everyday problems. He complained it's a commercialized curriculum. What do the children learn? At best, they learn: memorization, regurgitation, and vegetation. (Something he called deadening of the senses 101 in the 60's). They're sitting there, staring at screens. Virtual reality?

"When you have memorization of grammar, how long does that stick? Do you remember any of the grammatical rules? Judging by what is coming out of Yale and Harvard . . .

"How many of you have taken some of these multiple choice standardized tests sometime in (Continued on page 39)

He complained it's a commercialized curriculum. What do the children learn?... memorization, regurgitation...

the next couple of hours, Mr. Nader criticized many issues in government in the year 2000: child poverty, education, universal health care, the military and weapons, the war on drugs, the work force, corporate greed, the environment, even the

And then, he went into his schtick: "You watch late TV News?" he asked. "Ever see any 'issues' I'm talking about here being discussed? There's nine minutes of ads, three minutes of street crimes (if it doesn't bleed, it doesn't lead), four minutes of sports, one minute of an animal story (a cute little cat or dog or kangaroo, whatever), one minute of chit chat between anchors, four minutes of weather (oh, they're obsessed with the weather).

A Superintendent's Decision

New Superintendent's Decision At Bridgehampton About One Matter Affects Another: Vaccines

By Jerry Cimisi

"This had nothing to do with the vaccine issue," said the newly appointed Interim Superintendent of the Bridgehampton School, Anthony Pecorale. In a phone interview on Tuesday, August 29, Dr. Pecorale discussed his eleventh hour decision—some might have said eleven hours and fifty-five minutes—to no longer allow out-of district students to attend the Bridgehampton School.

"I wanted to keep a better student-teacher ratio at the school, Dr. Pecorale said."

It seemed a resolution that ended a very controversial issue not with a bang but a whimper, an issue not about out-of-district students, but vaccines. And it was an issue that grew to touch those outside the school these past months. In early August the controversy was featured in an article in the New York Law Journal.

It was an issue that also was a personal one. We had decided to no longer give our five year old daughter vaccines and had been confronting the school on this decision since the spring.

In another phone interview on September 5, Bridgehampton Superintendent Pecorale again asserted that his decision had nothing to do with the vaccine issue and said, "The state has been trying to keep the number of children in primary grades as low as possible because that's when children are getting their initial learning in math and reading."

Dr. Pecorale has been a superintendent at Bayport-Bluepoint and Lindenhust and an interim superintendent in four other schools.

In the Bridgehampton School there tends to be more out-of-district students in the lower grades than in the higher grades, most likely due to the fact that the pre-K classes offered at the school are, at least as of the past school year, the only free pre-K programs in the area. It is not surprising that at least a few out-of-district students who go to the pre-K will continue in the school, into kindergarten and beyond.

Mr. Pecorale said that there were a total of 175 students in the school during the last school year; fifteen of those were out-of-district. As of the very beginning of the school year this September, without the out-of-district students, there were 162 students enrolled in the school.

In regards to the kindgergarten class, which our daughter would have been entering, there are thirteen students. Mr. Pecorale said that if out-of-district students had been allowed to continue at the school, there would have been seventeen. "I think the kindergarten students would receive a better education with thirteen students than with seventeen," he said.

Three out-of-district familes had claimed a religious exemption for their children from New York state mandated immunization. All of the families had had their children in the Bridgehampton School for some time, for periods ranging from one and a half years to four years, and the school had not had a problem with the parents keeping their children from the mandated vaccinations until this past April, when then-Superintendent Dr. Stuart Rachlin insisted that all students at the school must have the immunizations.

The New York State Law allows an exemption from the required vaccinations on religious grounds. In a 1990 amendment to the law, one no longer has to be a member of a "bon-fide religion" to claim the exemption.

Through the latter part of the spring and through but, it should be noted, not whether to allow such students or not, but whether they would be charged a tuition fee to attend Bridgehampton.

In past years, various Bridgehampton boards had decided, before the end of each school year, to waive any tuition fee. This year the board seemed unable to come to any resolution on the matter by the end of June. At one point in the summer, during one meeting, the board announced it would retire to an executive (in other words, closed) session to disccuss the matter, but were informed this had to be discussed in public. An editorial in The Southampton Press took the board and its new president, Carlyle Turner, roundly to task for this near violation of the The Sunshine Laws.

Turner had become president of the board on July 1; ex-president John Wyche remains on the board.

At any rate, by midsummer, the board was saying that with the new school year so close, it didn't make sense to initiate any change now, but the board might do so in the future.

And then, as fifteen out-ofdistrict students readied to return to a school that they had each attended for various spans of time, Mr. Pecorale closed the door on them.

Mr. Pecorale's decision might have been understandable if there were a sizable body of out-of-district students. And even if he anticipated there will be in the the near future, it would seem that the more humane thing to do, in regards to the out-of-district students already in the school, was to allow them to remain but say that no more students could come into the school from outside of Bridgehampton.

* * *
The vaccine issue and the out-of-district issue seemed intertwined, at least in the minds of the parents fighting for religious exmption from vaccines, throughout the summer. It was suspected that the school would resolve the vaccine issue by charging tuition for the out-of-district children, but when the board apparently said it was putting the latter issue aside for the future, Pecorale's decision

Again, and as detailed in a previous article earlier this summer ("Vaccine Controversy," July 7,) we were among the parents seeking a vaccine exemption for our daughter; we were also out-of-district.

Our daughter began to attend the preschool at Bridgehampton in Ferbruary, 1999. We are in the Sag Harbor district. Sag Harbor did not have a pre-K program. When we were interviewed prior to our daughter's admittance, we were asked if we would continue to send her to Bridgehampton if she were accepted there. We indicated, truthfully, we could not say yes or no at the time.

Our daughter took to the preschool at Bridgehampton happily. The school raised no issue over vaccines. She returned there in September, the summer, the families sent letters of explanation detailing their reasons for opposing vaccinations and attended school board meetings. The attorneys for the school responded to the effect that families had not proven their spiritual beliefs. There was talk of a lawsuit from one set of parents. The issue was covered in the local papers – and in an August 7 article in the Long Island Edition of the New York Law Journal.

There are parents who may express concern that to have unvaccinated children in a class with their vaccinated child, would expose their child to some risk. Dr. Bob Gottleib of Southampton Pediatrics, said, "Well, the whole idea behind vaccination is that a vaccinated person will be protected from the disease they are vaccinated against."

By the end of the summer, the school still had not changed its ruling on the matter. Then, a week and half before school was about to start, Superintendent Pecorale, who had been appointed only the week before to replace the newly departed Superintendent, Dr. Stuart Rachlin, swept aside what had become nothing less than a Kafkan struggle by various parents with his ruling concerning out-of-district students.

In fact, the issue of out-of-district students at the Bridgehampton School had been another issue the school board had discussed these past months –

1999. We had been planning to send her to Bridgehampton for kindergarten this September.

In April we received the letter from then-Superintendent Dr. Stuart Rachlin stating that for our daughter to continue at Bridgehampton she must have all the mandated imunizations, which she did not.

We had been leery of vaccines from the beginning. A little research had shown that vaccines, if one of the advances of modern medicine, had a little-publicized downside – from the possibly cancercausing virus from simians found in millions of polio shots from the 50s, to the continued adverse reactions many children suffer from the DTP (diptheria-pertusssis-tetanus) to the fact that no insurance company will ensure against any damage done by an immunization. (The federal government has set up a program to pay damages to individuals who have been harmed by vaccines.)

The above medical concerns were only a prelude to our objections against what was in many of the vaccines: animal products as well as, in the case of two vaccines, human fetal cells. As vegans who do not consume or use any animal products because we believe it immoral to live off of slaughtered creatures, we were also distrubed at the use of cells from abortions.

At a Bridgehampton School Board meeting June 26, the board had followed the advice of their attorney, Mark Cuthbertson of Payne, Wood and Littlejohn's Melville office, and voted not to allow us a religious exemption from vaccines. We had been at this board meeting through the public session, then we had left when it went into its private, executive session. John Wyche, who was at the time the president of the board, told us we would receive an answer at the board's next meeting, July 10. But at the June 26 meeting, after the board came out of its executive session, it took its vote while we were not present. We were not informed in writing of the vote, nor did anyone from the school communicate it to us. We did not find out about it until the July 10 meeting when it was opened to public comment. Even then, for some reason, the information was not offered freely.

Theresa Quigley, attorney for the board from Payne, Wood and Littlejohn's Bridgehampton office, said, after I asked her just who ultimately made the decision on the vaccine issue – the board, the attorneys, or the superintendent – that the decision had already been made by a vote of the board. Surprised, I inquired when the decision had been made and was told it had happened at the end of the previous board meeting.

We received another letter from attorney Cuthbertson saying, in essence, we had not proven our beliefs were religious based.

The rest of the summer was spent in a sort of perpetual anquish. We approached three religious leaders for support in affirming to the authorities that our beliefs were indeed spritiual: Robert Smith, a priest and Catholic ethicist, Frances Arnetta, a minister for Elohim Christian Fellowship and Gurudev Chitrabhanu, a Jainist.

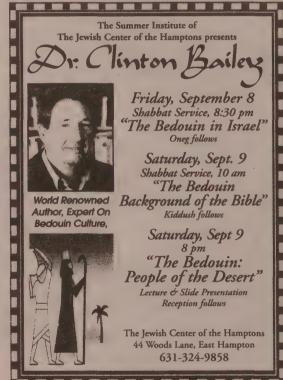

While we were doing this, in midsummer, an article by Julia Mead appeared in the Long Island edition of the New York Law Journal. In it I was quoted as saying I saw our daughter as having a "de facto" exemption as she had attended Bridgehampton for a year and a half without all the required vaccines and there had been no problem — and there had been no change in the Public Health Law during this time period. I was quoted, "I say that it is my spiritual belief that I don't use animal products. Who's to say otherwise?

Ms. Quigley, was quoted extensively throughout the article and it closed with her saying, "I still don't know how to define religion, but I know it when I see it."

It was a remark I would suspect Ms. Quigley, who had five out-of- district children in the Bridgehampton School, would probably think not quite the thing to say if she had mused upon it, but, unfortunately, it was said, and it struck those

By Dan Rattiner

In the spring of 1997, editor Arthur Levine of Scholastic Books, went to Bologna, Italy to attend a book fair known as the Children's Rights Fair. Editors and publishers were coming in from all over the world and among the things to be done at this fair was to buy the rights to different books published around the world. At the fair he met some publishers from the firm of Bloomsbury, from London, who were selling the rights to, among other things, a book by J. K. Rowling, an unknown English writer who had come out with a novel entitled, Harry Potter, The Chalice Of Fire, to moderate effect in that country. Levine thought little of it at the time but took a copy and read through it, he loved it.

On the plane back to New York he thought that the firm he worked for, Scholastic Books, should bid for the American rights to this novel. I was talking about this to Barbara Marcus, a resident of North Haven for the last six years, who is vice president of Scholastic Books and president of the children's division. "There was a buzz about this book," she said. "It had just been published in England and had been nominated for a children's award. I read a bit of it and so did the president of the whole company, Richard Robinson and we decided to bid for the American rights. All of us, myself, Robinson, Levine and some of the others involved, expected that the bidding would go somewhere between $35,000-$50,000. The consensus was maybe it would be a classic and sell over time. Christopher Little ran the bidding from London by a transatlantic telephone. One firm would make a bid and then another, the bidding got to $50,000 then to $60,000 and we bid it up to $80,000. Penguin Putnam went higher. We turned to Arthur, "Do you really love this book?" I asked him. "Because if so, we're going to go for it."
"Yes I do," he said.

Penguin Putnam bid $100,000 for American rights, an unheard amount for a children's book and we took it up to $105,000 and Penguin dropped out," Marcus said.

Normally, the first printing of a children's book would be ten or fifteen thousand copies. But Scholastic was so confident of this book they ran a first printing of 50,000. That was three months ago. Today the total number sold for Harry Potter books exceeds $28,000,000, all from Scholastic. The latest adventure, Harry Potter, Goblet of Fire was produced in a first edition of 3,800.000 "It's been the fastest selling book of all time. Barbara Marcus said. "And this first printing we've just done is the biggest first printing that anyone can ever recall for any book, children's or adults."

"What accounts for it?" I asked.

"What Arthur Levine loved and what we love, is that it is a beautiful and imaginatively written book about a child who finds he is a wizard. There is a great inventiveness to the world that J. K. Rowling has created, and Harry and his friends are people you'd really want to know or be. I don't have to tell you, she writes beautiful books.

Scholastic Books is based in SoHo and has annual revenues in excess of two billion dollars. It was founded by the father of the current president, Richard Robinson, and is eighty years old. There are magazine divisions, text book divisions, divisions that sell CD ROM's and TV shows and then the children's division, which is the largest. It publishes 100 hardcover and 500 paperback titles a year.

Barbara Marcus grew up in Eastchester, a small town north of New York in Westchester County. "Eastchester was the home of John Paul Zanger." Marcus said. "Marble for the capital building in Washington was mined in our town, and the elementary school that I went to was named after Ann Hutchinson, a well known feminist."

Barbara's mother was an elementary school teacher at Anne Hutchinson, and her daughter was in her classroom. Her father was a dentist. She has an older sister. "In high school I got very interested in history," she said. "My greatgrand parents on my mother's side were in the furniture business. They had stores all over downtown Manhattan, Samuel Lackow and Sons in the Wall Street area, Beaver Street, Franklin. The stores are gone, but the signage for some of them is still there. I've gone down and seen it. At Tufts University, north of Boston, she got interested in literature as well as history. The student government put her in charge of the lecture bureau and she brought in Gloria Steinham, Supreme Court Justice William Douglas. Cassius Clay, Jane Fonda, R.D. Lang, and dancer Edward Villella, all of whom spoke in the student union. "I arranged to put them up in private homes and in hotels; I handled the logistics."

She married Michael Pollack who has recently retired from owning a chain of retail stores and he's a stay at home dad. He and Barbara have two daughters, age six and thirteen. They have the house in North Haven and an apartment in Tribeca. "I've been coming out to the Hamptons since 1973 when I was in college," she said. "I took a house share in Quogue, and Hampton Bays and then in Sag Harbor. I very much enjoyed the beach.'

After getting her degree at Tufts, Barbara moved to Manhattan where she got an apartment on Banks Street in the Village. Her first job was waitressing. Then she got a job at Bantam Books in the publicity department working for Esther Margolis. She stayed for eight years and then took a job at Putnam Books in charge of the Marketing Department. "In 1983, Scholastic Books hired me and put me in charge of marketing. In 1991, I was made Executive Vice-President of the children's books division, and in 1998, its president."

At Scholastic, in addition to Harry Potter, Marcus, along with her colleagues, have built a children's publishing program which includes such best-selling series as The Baby-sitters Club, The Magic School Bus, Goosebumps, I Spy and Animorphs. Marcus also has been integral in developing Scholastic's own proprietary distribution channels - school book clubs and direct marketing home programs. Marcus believes that Scholastic's commitment to getting children excited about becoming lifelong readers has enabled it to grow its business and create books kids really like to read.

The Marcuses are out here almost every weekend. year round, and then are here full time during the month of August and part of September. The family goes to Scott Cameron Beach and Sagg Main Beach, and is part of a group of close friends who spend a great deal of time at each other's houses at North people involved in this struggle as telling of the attitude of those who made decisions.

In her letter offering support for our position, Reverend Frances Arnetta, wrote she was "appalled" at Ms. Quigley's comment and offered the following from I Samuel 16:7 - "Man looks on the outer appearance, but the Lord looks on the heart."

Rev. Arnetta continued with: "...true religion is not denominations with their rules and regulations, but the human heart's relationship with God. And who can judge that?"

Rev. Robert S. Smith, of the Seminary of the Immaculate Conception, wrote our claim of opposing "mandated vaccination" is based "on their religious and spiritual beliefs and so entitled to the respect for such beliefs recognized in judicial decisions."

He added that although he did not share our "beliefs or their judgements about the refusal of vaccination. I do, however, respect their religious convictions as I hope my fellow citizens respect my Gurudev Chitrabhanu of the Jain Meditation International Center, wrote, "This spiritual belief is as strong as the commandment 'Thou Shalt Not Kill.' He went on to say that vaccines "based on the torture and killing of animals and beings" violated the precepts of ahimsa and that "people are following this spiritual belief, sometimes at great sacrfice...and with a painful feeling of being trapped in doing something against one's conscience." Jainism is one of the world's oldest religious. Its central tenet is ahimsa: to live in such a way as to not contribute to violence or suffering. In other words, what would be called, in Christianity, the Golden Rule.

The Shellered Islander by sally Hymn

Observations of an Islander #122 Roll Out The Barrel..

The kids go back to school this week and not a day too soon.

There comes a time in every child's life when they are sick of their friends. They don't want to play one more game of miniature golf, they've seen every movie, they hate the beach, everything's a bore to them.

The last week before school starts is the toughest. Thank God the school sends out memos of what they need for the coming year which gives them a new focus, back to school preparation.

Kids get into back to school shopping. Have to have the right notebook, the Pokeman pencils, the irridescent glow-in-the-dark pencil box with a sick face on it that plays six songs when you open it. The 3-ring binder with the foldover velco flap, two dollars extra. This security level is needed. The kids never know when they might be doing cancer research. The lunch box with coordinated napkin ring and separate boxes for the salad, entree, dessert and bottled water. The requirements for "coolness" have gone way up.

My ex bought my daughter an LL Bean beautiful green backpack last year, monogramed no less.

Ballistic nylon with straps that could support a Buick. She can't use it this year. Backpacks have left the cool-zone. "Courier" bags are in. Large totes so they can put forty pounds of books on one shoulder and eliminate that annoying even distribution of weight created by backpacks. The Courier bags will cause much more pain and the student who suffers the most wins. Also acceptable is the backpack that just has one strap, again staying with the one shoulder bears all requirement.

Clothes shopping for school: always a peak experience for mothers. I have tried to raise my daughter to have taste. I have always worn clothes that can be seen in the dark and underwater. Reds, yellows, sequins, gold fringe. Style... My daughter dresses in vanilla, taupes, mauve, all these horrible muted tones. I don't know where I went wrong.

At least I can still dress my son. He has the male gene for comfort. He doesn't care how he looks, he must be comfortable. He hates shopping. As soon as we get what he wants, he wants to leave. Just like that. The fine art of browsing for serendipitous finds is lost on him.

Soon the kids will enter into the Twilight Zone called Day One. Day Two. For those of you fortunate enough to not know what Day One Day Two is, let me ruin your day. Day One Day Two is the official NY State school teaching system. The students have certain subjects on Day One, other subjects on Day Two. They alternate these two schedules to maximize the child's exposure to knowledge. Sounds perfect. Uh huh. Remember Das Kapital and the axiom for governing; "from each according to his ability, to each according to his needs" that sounds perfect too, doesn't it?

Day One Day Two, like communism, is perfect on paper. The only time problems arise is when you add people.

The school has to post Day One and Day Two signs all around the building to keep everyone straight. Kids constantly bring home Day One books for the next day and hence can't do the Day Two homework they got two days ago. The homework for Day Two is done the evening before on Day One and vice versa. Unless there was a holiday. In which case the day after could be another Day Two, unless the state ignores that holiday and leaves the next day as a Day One. Are you still with me? Good, 'cause I'm friggin' lost!

I suppose some classes could be assigned to Mon - Wed - Fri and some could be Tues- Thur, but that would make sense, and this is a state imposed system after all. I can see some advantages to Day One, Day Two. First, I've let my kids stay home on days they mixed up their books and blew the homework. They beg to stay home rather than face an angry teacher and get an "Incomplete Homework."

Another benefit is the work generated by having to keep track of all the Day One, Day Two mishegas. If it takes a teacher two minutes to post the Day One or Day Two sign in, lets say, just ten places in the building, that's twenty minutes. Multiple that by the number of schools in New York and viola! Job security!

I have a bottle of champagne cooling in the icebox. Wednesday, Sept 6th 8 a.m., the kids go back to skool. 8:05 a.m., I pop the cork.

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

Even thought we've finally gotten some warm weather this week, Labor Day marks the end of summer for most people. School started a few days ago and brought back the memory of stories about "what I did on my summer vacation." Writing it down helps to organize our memories and has made me think a little about "word magic,"

There's an exercise used to remember your dreams. I took a dream workshop years ago. One of the main tools to remember your dreams better is to keep a note pad by the bed and write the dreams down. I haven't done that in years but I've been having wild dreams recently and might start compiling a dream journal. In one dream, this week, I was in Mexico where my suitcases were left in the wrong vehicle, a hundred miles away. When it was time to take me to the airport, we discovered the error. I got very upset. Friends tried to calm me. Someone offered to cook me dinner while the hired driver drove back up North for the bags. The VW van we'd been in was parked in a bad spot. I was worried about the bags, the van, the flight and just about everything else. I woke up tired. There were other vivid dreams remembered only for a few minutes after awakening. The dream journal is a tool. It works. It allows you to look back and analyze the dreams. It allows you to remember them longer.

Keeping any kind of journal is a great practice. I have journals from junior high school that give me great pleasure to read. My mother and I both have kept travel journals. It's amazing to see patterns repeat themselves. The problems of the moment have been solved before. I have to laugh at myself. The journals give a little distance and perspective on the events of the moment. They help to process one's feelings.

As a result of fundraising at the gallery and our annual "Meet the Writers Book Fair," I've been presenting a grant for excellence in writing at Southampton College. The grant was established just after my mother's death. It's presented to a graduate student at the college every spring. It makes me a little nervous to have to speak at the awards ceremony but it gets easier with practice. Because I'm speaking to aspiring writers it has made me think about writing. Writing is extraordinary. If you want to be a writer the simple trick is, WRITE! If you do it, you will get better at it. Also it's good therapy. You don't have to let anyone see what you write. It can stay about yourself.

I was angry at someone the other day. It was not going to help to tell them about it. The best thing to do was simple. Write a letter and never send it. The key was in the writing, I managed to put all my frustration into a short letter and now I can throw the letter away. It helps. Sending the letter would probably not have helped.

private. It is something you can do for yourself,

I've been feeling out of touch with some of my family and friends. My step-daughter Kari has a baby girl. I haven't gotten to see her yet. I've been feeling negligent. Now that the summer is coming to an end I have more time to focus on personal issues. Yesterday I wrote Kari a letter. I feel a thousand percent better. I'm also missing my friend, Coralie, in France. Time to write! I can think of six other letters that have gone unwritten. I've put all my business correspondence at the top of my list of priorities and left my personal letters unwritten. With the season change, it's time for a personal change.

I end this with a bit of advice. Sit down and write a note to someone you care about. It will mean something to them. It will mean even more to you. Enjoy! I'm off to write some thank you

Andrew Baker of the Harbor Music Shop in Sag Harbor hosted the Harbor Day Music Camp 2000 at Boy's Harbor in East Hampton last week. Actor Chevy Chase gave a special seminar on his knowledge of the keyboard that was very well received. A drumming workshop was taught by Simon Kirk, the drummer of Bad Company and G.E. Smith, the former musical director of the Saturday Night Live band, taught a guitar clinic. The kids age eight to sixteen had a great time.

your life? You know, they're supposed to measure your intelligence, after three hours. You may hear one kid complain: 'Because of that test, I didn't get in the college of my choice,' or those that did well may say, 'I'm going to be a success.'

"What do those tests measure, other than your ability to answer the right question, A,B,C, or D? Not a very gratifying, constructive look to the future. They don't test what you actually know, and the most important things about you: your judgment, experience, diligence, stamina, creativity, and feelings.

"There's reference to show these tests, a form of fraud, and how they equate this influence on family. This has been true over decades. You "internalize" your test score and measure your selfworth. And you wouldn't even know you were being ripped off. These tests were articulated back in 1920 by one of its founders, who said, "The principal purpose of these tests (other than to be objective, which they're not) is to keep "hope" within reasonable bounds.'

"Putting a number on intelligence, defining it in such a crude and primitive way to measure the growth and multiple intelligence of a human being and their imagination..."

About the work force, Mr. Nader said that the majority of workers are making less today, between $5 to $9 an hour. "In my hometown in Connecticut, a textile working town, you rolled out of bed, had breakfast, walked to work (no expenses to work), you probably had an extended family, neighbors across the street to take care of the kids, whatever. That's how it was done. In 1950 you could own a six-room modest house, second-hand car, and support the family because it was on the market at 3%, thirty year mortgage, a completely different scale than today.

"Now, we have one out of every three workers who can't make it 'cause they have to have all the expenses of 'going to work' - at Wal-Mart. Then, they go deeper in debt. We're at $6.2 trillion in consumer debt. If you put it all together; what's going through their minds every morning: Are we gonna get to work on time? Will there be a traffic jam? Will the car work? Who's gonna pay for the day care? What if a parent or grandparent is ailing or elderly? What if I lose my health insurance? What if I have to put them in a nursing home?

"There's no time for comparison shopping or civic activities. Even their children are short-circuited. They are all exhausted; fall down in front of the TV set and watch Survivors. A zany show gives a little relief. But, this is not how life should be lived in 2000 AD in America."

And Nader, looking searchingly into the audience, asked why we don't do anything about child poverty. There are Western European countries, like Scandinavia and the Netherlands, who essentially abolished child poverty.

Nader told the crowd, who hung on to every word, "I've always disliked phony patriots, who say, 'We're #1 in the world.'

"It's a disgrace. Child poverty in California is at 25.2%. It was 15%, twenty years ago. In the District of Columbia, the nation's capital (if you believe the Washington Post), it's over 30%.

"Also", he went on, nonstop, "we're the only western country without universal health care. Over 46 million people are without health care insurance

"The environment – how long have they been saying they're gonna make our public drinking water safe?

"If you read about corporate political abuse – ten cents of every health dollar you spend is cheated – $100 billion this year, alone

"Get rid of cash register corrupt politics!" he shouted.

Mr. Nader went on and on. On abortion – RU46 – why in eight years is it still not available? On drugs, he stated it is more economical to send drug addicts to rehab rather than prison.

"We do not send alcoholics and nicotine addicts to jail. The cost of cocaine is high; so, there will be killing to get it."

At the end of Mr. Nader's speech, although none of what Mr. Nader talked about was anything "new," many faces in the auditorium looked somewhat blank and dispirited with today's society.

Mr. Nader is a man who grew up the son of immigrant parents from Lebanon, a man who learned "values." I read that his mother once said that Ralph was always comical with a wry sense of humor and an ability to imitate people. "If it weren't for his sense of humor, he couldn't do what he does — he deals with such seriousness," she said.

It has also been said of Nader; "He has the integrity of a Thoreau and the conscience of St. Francis."

As Mr. Nader talked about his campaign, he reiterated, "The American people must be given a voice." He had said earlier. "Your participation is power." He pointed out that the world is turning upside down, when the abnormal becomes normal and the normal becomes abnormal.

He looked deeply into the many faces before him, whether Green Party supporters or not, and he said, "Don't let anybody tell you you're extremists – it's just the opposite."

On our drive home, the mood in the car was also opposite – a little more somber.

could build TWO Hamptons there. They could have beautiful windmills, town ponds, old churches, lots of expensive stores. Call one Chic Hamptons. Call the other Celebrity Hamptons. Build a big lagoon with one of these wave machines. Put in an artificial beach.

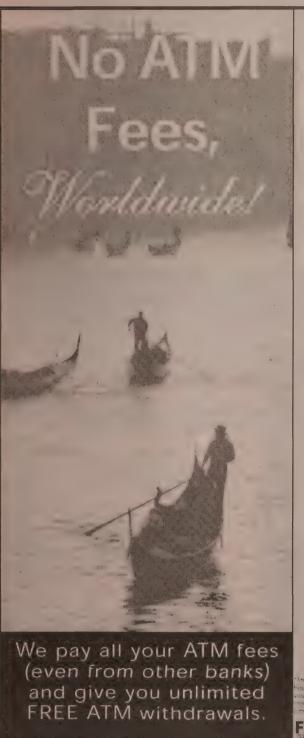

2. Put those wires that count cars on the pavement of all the main highways leading into each Hampton. Put up big electronic signs that count the cars coming into town. Everyone could see the numbers. When the numbers reach a certain point during the day, the cops block off the road. Sorry. Full. Safety, you know. Try again tomorrow.

- 3. Ban all cars from all the downtowns. Tear up the tracks of the Long Island Railroad. (The damn train only comes through a few times a day.) Replace the tracks with a Superhighway. Put in parking garages where the railroad stations are. Some of them a hundred stories high. Maybe one of them the biggest building in the world. Park your car. Take a tram, like they have at Disney or Six Flags. Wherever you go you go on foot. Take the tram back when you leave.
- 4. Sell tickets to the Hamptons. Purchased in advance only. Maybe only at that TKTS kiosk in Times Square where you buy Broadway show tickets. Or on Ticketron. Half the ticket price goes to an East End charity. The rest to sprucing the place up and care and maintenance. No ticket, no Hamptons.

5. Only let certain people into the Hamptons. You have to know somebody. Or bribe a doorman. Like Studio 54.

to be a ferry here somewhere.

There was a witness to all of this, fortunately, Captain Ed Kotula of the ferry ISLANDER rumbled into the slip on the Sag Harbor side at 1:40 am. There was no one around to take across. He tied up, opened the gate, waited five minutes. there was still nobody, and then he closed the gate. He went up to the wheelhouse, gave Ferry Road one last look, and then, gunning the engine, began the final trip of the day. The ISLANDER moved forward, away from shore, and, in the darkness began to slap its flat bottom against the two foot chop of the open water. Just two lights illuminated the ferry slip on Shelter Island in front of him. Behind him, the lights of the Sag Harbor slip got smaller and smaller.

He was just tying up on the Shelter Island side. and was looking at the car that had been parked there for the last six hours that would now take him home, when something made him turn and look back at Sag Harbor. Something had glinted in the light of the ferry slip. And then there was a big splash. Katula flipped on his police radio.

"We've got a problem here," he said.

Sean McGayhey, age thirty, was found sitting in the phone booth at the ferry slip, very wet and shaken up. He said he was driving a pickup truck. However it was nowhere to be found. Police suggested he take a breathalyzer test, he refused, and he was taken to Southampton Town, arraigned on charges of drunk driving, put in the lockup there, and, after being unable to raise $1,000 cash bail, was transferred to the Suffolk County Jail in Riverhead the following day to await trial.

Accidents like this are rare but have happened at the ferry slip before and so the President of the ferry company, Clifford Clark, put into action Plan B, which is to locate, hook and haul out with a crane whatever vehicle might be just offshore the dock.

In this case, the vehicle they found was a 1985 Ford Pickup with the whole front and caved in from where it had apparently hit the bottom twelve feet down.

"It was the worst I've seen," Clark said.

Worse than the last one, anyway, which was last Christmas morning at 5:55 a.m. when twenty two year old Chad Fenelon, a college student. drove a 1997 Toyota Camry off the dock and into the bay.

Fenelon, apparently had arrived at Ferry Road to take the 6:00 a.m. ferry to Shelter Island. But > visions of sugar plums were dancing in Fenelon's head. Or something anyway. He too was charged with driving while intoxicated after refusing a breathalyzer test. But that was not all. Taken to Southampton Town Police Station, cold and wet from swimming to shore. he was further charged with disorderly conduct when he allegedly fought with a police officer. It was not a good day for Fenelon. No car, wet clothes, no Christmas, an altercation with the police. Not good at all.

Before Fenelon, there hadn't been anybody driving off the dock into the drink in half a dozen years. Shelter Island now however, is suddenly the IN place. As in IN the bay. Twice in eight

A local developer named Carole Conner had imported, beam by beam, a barn from upstate New York. It was going to be re-erected as the centerpiece of a new $6 million oceanfront home being built in this community. But then it was missing from where she had the trucker put it along the side of Mecox Road. Who steals a barn? She called the police.

"Some of those beams are worth over $35,000 each," she said.

The details of the bringing-down-of-the-barn story are as follows. The barn had been in Elmira, New York, abandoned, on what had once been a dairy farm. A furniture maker, David Corcoran, who lives nearby, bought the barn for $1,000 and, two years later, sold it for $70,000 to Carole Conner. Conner had it disassembled, the pieces carefully marked in the same way you mark the stones of a castle being imported to America from Bavaria and then trucked down to this property she owns off Mecox Road. There it was placed in a big pile, alongside another pile of timbers on the property owned by a Vermont man named David Parker. Parker's timbers, according to Conners, are not worth much. Maybe a few hundred dollars each. Parker paid her a small rent for the privilege of keeping them there.

A week after Conner's barn was stolen, the mystery was solved. Not by the police. But because of a receipt that arrived in the mail.

Addressed to Carole Conner - a sign on the wood clearly said it belonged to Carole Conner - it came from the office of a Southampton builder named Joseph Stacheki, who has a showroom in town. It said that he had paid $3,360 as a deposit to Southampton resident Christopher Johns for the purchase of the chestnut barn beams owned by Carole Conner. And that he had hired the firm of Direct Distribution, Southampton, New York, to come and remove them. The job was done on August 12.

The police interviewed Stacheki. He said he had been approached in his showroom by Christopher Johns who said he had an old barn for sale, owned by a man named by David Parker, sitting in pieces by the side of Mecox Road, because a deal to sell the barn had gone bad. Johns took Stacheki to have a look. There was one sign that said Parker, and another sign that said Conner, and the Conner sign was on the chestnut beams he was buying so it was to Carole Conners he sent a copy of the receipt for the money he paid Johns.

Where was the barn now? It was still in the lot behind Direct Distribution in Southampton, because John Distefano, who owns Direct Distribution, would not move the barn any further until proof of the barn's pedigree got sorted out. There had been a meeting at Direct Distribution. Johns, upon learning Stacheki had sent a copy of the receipt to Conners, had driven off. Stacheki, refusing to give Johns a check, said he wasn't in the habit of buying hot wood, and he also had driven off.

No charges have been filed against anybody yet. But the $6 million project on the beach has been stalled. Sometime soon all this will have to get sorted out.

The board's last meeting before the school year began was on Monday, August 28. That afternoon I delivered copies of the above letters plus a new letter we had written on the matter to various individuals in the school, including Carlyle Turner, who had become Board President on July 1, the new Interim Superintendent Anthony Pecorale. Faxes were sent to Mr. Cuthbertson and Ms. Quigley.

One thing we did state in our letter was that. in the course of our legal research into the vaccine issue, we had found that by law we are not required to give any explanation of our religious beliefs to gain exemption, but to simply claim that exemption on religious grounds. If a school believes the religious claim is fradulent, they have to take the family to court.

It was the next day that I first spoke with Mr. Pecorale and was informed of his decision to not allow out-of-districts families in the school. It would be easy - indeed, it was next to instinctual - for me to conclude that this was the school's way of avoiding the vaccination issue; perhaps, one may have to give Dr. Pecorale the benefit of the doubt. Even then, I would have to disagree with his decision. If he has good reasons for keeping the Bridgehampton School solely for residents of the Bridgehampton district, I think it would have been a more humane decision to allow those fifteen out of districts students already in Bridgehampton to continue at the school and not allow new out-ofdistrict students from now on. For certainly, if these students who could have gone to other schools instead chose to go to Bridgehampton, they and their families must have an attachment to the school. It has to be a jolt, especially with the new school year so imminent, to be denied entrance.

Ironically - sadly, I should say - the last week of August we received a postcard of greeting from the teacher our daughter would have had at Bridgehampton's kindergarten. The card was postmarked the day after the board meeting at which Dr. Pecorale had made his decision. Apparently it was mailed just before the new state of affairs and been instituted in Bridgehampton. We did not show it to our daughter. She is upset, deeply, about not continuing in Bridgehampton, which she had referred to as "my school."

The Hampton Classic

The last great weekend of the summer always features the Hampton Classic horse events in Bridgehampton. In years past, this was a "must see" event with the tightest security and toughest wristbands to come by for the VIP tent, even when the Classic was marred by the untimely death of Princess Di. This year, we had rain delays as the Hamptons got selectively soaked by thundershowers. And this was the year where size didn't matter, color did, that being the color of your wristband, and if you had purple, you were made in the shade. Not being an equestrian,

I cannot comment on the jumps and other events, but I can tell you that the competition in the VIP tent was intense. Among the most important were Table Hopping and People Knowing which were in the finals when I left, and the competition for Avoiding Photogs went to Martha in a close race with Matt Lauer.

Modell Sports a Party_

Mitch Modell met the love of his life, Robyn, on Labor Day weekend several years ago and they decided to celebrate the anniversary of being smitten with a gala party at their home in Quogue, and invite a couple hundred of their closest friends. The party began with cocktails and appetizers at the pool where a live band played as the drinks flowed. In the pool were about a dozen ducks and they seemed to want to hang out in the pool and join the party. How the ducks got there, what made them continue to hang out in the pool and not go to check out Puff Daddy's or other parties is beyond me.

YOUR GUIDE TO NORTH FORK WINERIES AND VINEYARDS

An elegant affair at Galluccio Estates Gristina Vineyards

Wines By Morrell

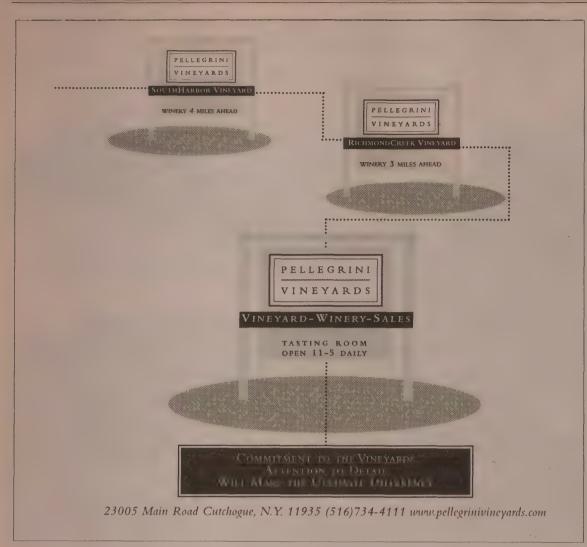

Possibly one of the most attractive wine shops in the country is presently in East Hampton. Located at 74 Montauk Highway in the Red Horse Shopping Mall, the shop features an extensive collection of representative wines and spirits from around the world including a large number of cold sakes, the finest wines from Long Island, summer roses, and a knowledgeable staff focused on service. The shop also features a climate controlled wine vault (Old & Rare Room), antique wine posters, wine antiques on consignment and a wine tasting area highlighted by a seven foot diameter tunneau or wine barrel built in Paris in 1850.

Various old wine and liquor bottles adorn the interior and one can find old maderas from the late 1800's as well as large casks of whisky from 1865 still in their original wooden enclosures.

Starting on Memorial Day Weekend and continuing each week on Saturdays from 4-7 p.m., the store will conduct wine tastings with various vineyards and producers featuring their best wines. In additional to the complementary wine, each presenter will share details about the wine, how it was made and how it should be served. An extensive collection of wines and spirits and friendly service make Wines By Morrell an exciting and unique shop to drop by and surround yourself in wine memorabilia and good conversation. So come on by and sit around the outdoor water fountain while sipping a cool glass of whatever suits your fancy.

DAN'S WINE LIST

Wine Weekend came in like a barracuda and left like a grape blossom as the East End's wineries braved some initially rough weather to engage in three days of reveling to do Bacchus proud. Our intrepid reporter amid his rovings found much to rave about. p. 49.

In the shadow of the acclaim garnered by Long Island's strong merlot and chardonnay varietals comfortably lies the region's champagnes. Pop the cork on a local vintage come holiday season and you may be bubbling over with good fortune. p. 50.

Pellegrini Vineyards of Cutchogue has steadily produced some of the region's most appreciated and artful wines since its inception in the early 1980s. Owner Bob Pellegrini's background as a successful graphic artist of corporate reports readied him for the precision of winemaking. But the certainties of paper and ink proved no match for the caprices of soil and climate. Twenty years into their adventure Pellegrini and his original winemaker Russell Hearn are becoming less and less fooled by Mother Nature. p. 51.

Lenz Winery's Chardonnay Classic again proved to be one of the East End's top summer affairs. Eighty seven wineries put their best chards forward and one guest walked home with a Lenz Gold Label as well as a bottle of the much vaunted Le Montrachet chardonnay from France. p. 56.

For Long Island Wineries - Its Party Time!

By Roy Bradbrook

Mid August is the time of year when the Long Island Wine Council presents Wine Weekend, during which wineries on Long Island hold a wide variety of events, which inform people about their new releases, the range of wines they offer and overall, match wonderful surroundings with some increasingly wonderful wines.

Hedonism could almost be redefined as sitting under a tent on the edge of a vineyard sipping a favorite Long Island wine, eating a selection of very inviting food, and at many wineries, listening to some enchanting music. Much as one would like to be able to visit every winery, this is physically impossible over the short weekend. SO choices, based on sensible logistics and summer traffic, had to be made.

Unfortunately, Friday night at Wolffer Estates did not totally conform to our idealistic concept because, regretta-bly, it rained. Despite this the group which gathered there heard winemaker Roman Roth discuss

"Terroir," that almost untranslatable word which encapsulates the cumulative effect of soil slope and climate which greatly influences the basic character of grapes grown in different regions. He also explained how vineyard management in different regions is honed to making the best use of the local terroir to optimize grape and therefore wine quality. Under umbrellas we walked around parts of the vineyards where Roman showed examples of vines dressed according to the custom in many parts of Europe and compared these to the methods used here. After drying out externally, the visitors moved into the winery to tour the cellars and to sample the Wolffer wines. The second part of the evening consisted of a talk by Bill Kiriazis on the relationship between wine and art, which he illustrated with a wide choice of slides. Roman Roth also answered a variety of questions on subjects ranging from the age curve of red wines, to the great years for Long Island wines and of course, with the current inclement weather in mind, several on the prospects for this year's vintage.

On Saturday, the weather was much more in character with the Wine Festival. Under the trees at Bedell Cellars about seventy guests listened as Kip Bedell talked with quiet authority about the merlot he has made there from 1985 to date. The vertical tasting gave a fascinating insight into how well the older wines have kept. He also discussed the major changes in vineyard management which have taken place over the years as winemakers have learned more of the nuances of our region and how to adjust methods to ensure that wine quality continually improves. Afterward, the tasting guests enjoyed a buffet lunch of duck and lobster from John

Martha Clara took far too much time because of traffic, so we arrived towards the end of what had obviously been a very enjoyable and relaxed affair. The current wines were all there for tasting. Guests could also see the plans of the beautiful new tasting rooms and winery buildings planned for completion in a couple of years time. Rides through the vineyards in a horse drawn carriage, somewhat reminiscent of the famous logo of the Entenmanns family who own the winery, proved to be a particularly popular choice. This ride allowed guests to fully appreciate the beauty of their surroundings. The raw bar and the barbecue added to the enjoyment of the afternoon.

Pam Hunt is responsible for sales and special events and was obviously very pleased that their '99 Riesling had just won a Silver Medal at the New York State Fair. "We had a lot of very good competition at the show so this is a medal we really prize. Today we have been able to give people a glimpse of the changes we plan to make here. Our beautiful barn will become a tasting room for next season and we hope to have the new permanent tasting room and winery buildings finished

Sparklers Are A Girl's Best Friend

By Mary Foster

"When you go to a wine shop to buy a bottle of wine, what do you look for?" asked my friend Janey. Now Janey loves to go to dinners, and parties, and is often invited to such festivities. So I knew that in the back of her mind she was thinking about what to take to a host when a dinner guest.

We joked a bit about our favorite wine being free wine, but I could see her question was serious. I think it's important, I said, to establish a relationship with your local wine merchant or liquor store, who, frankly, wants to keep seeing you and keep your business.

A lot of people don't understand how wine stores work. If your looking for something your wine store doesn't have, never mind going to another store, simply ask the owner to order it for you. Usually they will. Sometimes they tell you it will take a while, but if they do, tell them you'll wait for it, that you would like to try it, they will manage to get it for you.

But more to the point, they are a wonderful resource as they taste a lot of wines to determine what to stock on their shelves. Some wines they select because of their popularity, some because of the "niche" that a particular wine fills in their repertoire or it intrigues them. For example, South African wines, which, after a long absence, have come back into the market, as we now have good trade relationships with South Africa.

What's a Dinner Guest To Do?

"But let's say, you're going to buy a wine to take to a dinner party..." interrupted Janey.

Yep, I was right. That was her real interest. In that case, I suggested, I would probably take something I was familiar with and knew was very good, in the hopes that it would be served.

"But you never can tell what your friends are going to serve for dinner," Janey reminded me.

I thought about it. What did I do the last time I was asked to dinner? I tried to recollect. I like to cook, and it's so much fun concocting something with all the ripe local produce and fresh sea fare to choose from. Currently at the farm stands are eggplant, tomatoes, basil, zucchini, and blackberries. Peaches are late so they're still in season. Melons are fantastic this year. And it's a great year for corn. Striped bass is fresh and spectacular, as is the tuna, Spanish mackerel and weakfish. There's lobster of course, clams, crabs, and my all-time favorite, swordfish.

I think I try to remember to ask what they're serving, so I could select an appropriate wine for the occasion, I concluded. Actually, a lot of times, I am bringing some additional thing to the dinner, so I know what's being served. But if not, or if I didn't remember to ask, I would try to take something unusual. Certainly, if I were invited to dinner here, or in New York, or outside this wine region, I would take a local wine.

Which Local Wine?

"OK," said Janey, "Let's say you wanted to take a local wine, and you walk into your local wine shop, would you select a Merlot or a Chardonnay, because that is what the region is known for?"

Everyone says that Long Island's premier grape is merlot. I agree with that, it's true. But a lot of people don't appreciate the fact that the region is capable of growing other varieties very well.

In fact, I don't think there is a better "champagne" (can't use the capital "C" unless its from the Champagne region of France) or sparkling wine made in the United States, for the price, than some of these produced right here. In fact, master of wine Mary Mulligan, in her book Wine for Dummies names New York and California as being famous for their sparklers, and producing some fine examples.

I agree. Some excellent ones from our region are Wolffer Estate ($29), Lenz ($30) Macari, ($17) and Jamesport, ($20). I understand Castello di Borghese/Hargrave is planning to produce one, and so is Leib Cellars. And you know that champagne is always welcome, and goes so well with all foods, or as an aperitif alone. It's a celebration in itself!

Ms. Mulligan says she prefers to serve champagne or sparkling wine as an aperitif "because opening the bottle of Champagne is a ceremony in tinsel that bring everyone together as a group. Champagne honors your guests. And a glass of champagne is compelling enough that to spend a thoughtful moment tasting it doesn't seem rude, even people who think it's absurd to talk about wine understand that Champagne is too special to be ignored. Unlike many white wines, champagne stands alone just fine, without food." She also suggests her favorite champagne and food pairings: turkey, lamb, ham, aged asiago, gouda or parmesan cheeses. "I like oysters on ice with bubbly, the old classic."

"You've convinced me" said Janey. Sparkling wine can be a girl's best friend. Now, what do I look for on the label?

Easy, I say. "Methode champenoise. If it's made methode champenoise it is made in the French tradition. And of course, look for the North Fork of Long Island, or The Hamptons, Long Island, which is an assurance that the grapes are grown in our region. Select the bottle that has not been exposed to light, serve the sparkler cold, and keep it in an ice bucket (half cold water, half ice), to keep the bubbles lively.

And you needn't reserve it for company. Mary M. lists ten excuses to drink a sparkler and celebrate. I will list one: The noise and traffic are gone, it's Labor Day, and the East End is sparkling!

Pellegrini Vineyards - Aiming To Be The Very best

By Roy Bradbrook

Bob Pellegrini, the owner of Pellegrini Vineyards in Cutchogue is the first to admit that when he first bought land to plant his vineyards almost twenty years ago the thought of wine making really appealed to him at a hobby level. "I had read about the Hargraves, who were the real pioneers out here so I came out to see what it was all about, but also, with the intent of liking it, if at all possible," he told me. Wine making was very much removed from the very successful graphic design business Bob Pellegrini had built up since he graduated from college with a degree in Fine Art. "We became known for our work with the financial industry and I was known as the designer who really understood Wall Street! Annual Reports are so very important to companies and this is a field where we have specialized over the years."

Moving back to the vineyard part of his life, he went on with a smile, "In some ways, what we have here now is a hobby that has run amok — in the nicest sense of the word. I am a truly hands-on person so, over the years I have learned a great deal about the art and science of winemaking and vineyard management but I still would not call myself a winemaker, just as the fact that I am a pretty good cook where four or five people are concerned does not make me a chef capable of turning out 100 delicious meals a night. Today, even though I still think of myself as continuing to be hands on, I don't do the pruning anymore or clean out the tanks, even though I still could do these jobs."

Bob Pellegrini is very forthright when it comes to the objectives he has for his winery. "I'm here to make truly high quality wines. Jug wines and the like are not what we are about. We have a great team here who have shown that even in a so called bad year, by careful selection and expert skills, we still can make a good wine and, in a good year, excellent wine."

Pellegrini Vineyards has dedicated considerable research and resources to vineyard management. "In the very early days the advice we were given by consultants was based largely on experiences in areas such as upstate

Office (631)722-3647

New York. Now this is an area with its own climate and soil so we really have had to find out many things for ourselves. Currently, we have ongoing trials where we are using different plot characteristics in respect to plant spacing and density. From this project we expect to emerge with an even better understanding of just how to optimize the use of this land. As we refine our methods of viticulture we will get better ripening each year and this is essential if we are going to continually improve the quality of our wines."

Russell Hearn is the winemaker for Pellegrini Vineyards and is a native of Australia. He has been at Pellegrini from day one, and naturally he shares Bob Pellegrini's ambition in respect to making high quality wines.

The Vintner's Pride tasting which they offer for a modest fee allows visitors to the winery to sample four of their top wines. The '97 Vintner's Pride Chardonnay is a well rounded wine which was aged sur-lies in oak and bottled unfiltered. It is a very good example of high quality Long Island chardonnay. Two of their red wines are the '98 cabernet franc which has a lot of fruit aromas and low tannins and is very smooth on the palate. It would be ideal for summer drinking. The 97 Cabernet Sauvignon is a more intense wine with a long finish and will almost certainly benefit from keeping, if you can resist drinking it now. A totally different wine is the 97 Vintner's Pride Finale which is an "ice wine" and has all of the characteristic richness and subtleties of flavor you would expect as well as a very long finish on the palate. This is a wine for sipping with desserts or exotic dishes such as foie gras or with strongly flavored cheeses. Bob Pellegrini emphasized that these are all wines which were produced from specially selected areas of the vineyards and consequently are available in limited quantities only.

The world of a top graphic designer is one where nothing must be left to chance. The graphic designer must have the ability to control and to deliver the finished product on time. The world of wine making, though, is very different. It is one where the ultimate control is not in the hands of mere mortals for, as Thomas a Kempis sagely said many centuries ago, "Man proposes but God disposes," as we come to the time of this year's harvest many are watching the uncertain weather and wondering what gifts will be disposed for us this year. Bob Pellegrini summed it up very well. "Yes, in many ways it is frustrating for me that we cannot exercise the same degree of control as I can in my other business. What I can do, and what I do, is to ensure that all those things which are controllable are very carefully controlled. In this way we will continue to make significant progress, to learn more and more about all the factors which affect grape and wine quality in this part of the world. I am convinced that with all the effort and resources that we, and many other owners, are putting into our wineries here on Long Island we will make wines of even higher quality in the years ahead. I want this winery to produce grapes nurtured to the maximum ripeness and then by using the best blending techniques, produce the highest quality wines, and I believe that we are well on the way to achieving these for 2001," said Ms. Hunt.

From Martha Clara we moved next door to Macari Vineyards. Here the mood of the day was definitively Spanish with offerings of delicious tapas from Juan Carlos of Tolmate Catering accompanied by melodic soulful flamenco guitar music played very expertly by Basilico, which really added to the overall spirit of the party. Joe and Alex Macari were indefatigable and charming hosts to around eighty guests who relaxed in the gentle late afternoon and early evening sunlight. To add to the enjoyment, two of the latest releases from Macari were offered throughout the event. These were the '97 Bergen Road, an award-winning Bordeaux type blend which seems likely to become one of the prime wines of the region, and Macari's new red table wine, Colina 48, a very drinkable blend which sells at under $10 a bottle. Many of Macari's other wines were tasted as the evening progressed and the first full day of wine weekend came to a close.

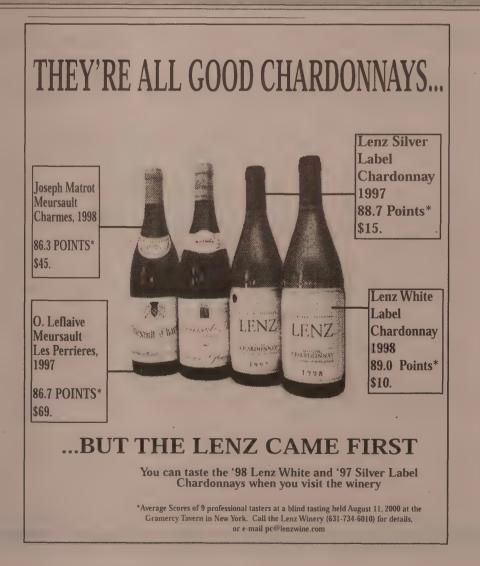

Sunday afternoon brought that perfect combination of blue sky, sunshine, low humidity and comfortable temperatures which is not often found here in August. Galluccio Estates Gristina Vineyard looked at its very best as guests gathered in the tasting room, around the deck or under a splendid tent to enjoy. The elegant Reserve Chardonnay, or the Rose made exclusively from cabernet sauvignon grapes which served as the perfect foil for the weather and the ambiance. Guests also took the opportunity to make a vertical tasting of the Gristina cabernet sauvignon vintages which demonstrated why they enjoy such a reputation with wine lovers on Long Island and further afield.

The new owner of the winery, Vince Galluccio and General Manager John Perry were exceptionally gracious hosts and everyone enjoyed the delicious food presented by A Small Affair from Quogue. Appropriately elegant music to accompany a picture perfect afternoon was provided.

It would be wonderful if it were possible to sample the delights of all of the events held during Wine Weekend but this of course is impossible for many reasons. The events we were privileged to attend exhibited the Long Island wine industry and the individual wineries at their very best and will have made many of their guests even more aware of the foresight and dedication of the winery pioneers out here. They will also recognize just how far the industry has come in a relatively short space of time. It, in addition, will have given a foretaste of some of the exciting developments which are poised to move many Long Island wineries even further into the exalted regions of world class wine.

Lenz Winery Stages Chardonnay World Classic

By Roy Bradbrook

On a perfect summer Sunday afternoon over threehundred people took the opportunity to visit the Lenz Chardonnay World Classic to taste a selection of eightyseven wines from all over the world. Twelve of Long Island's wineries were represented so this was a great opportunity to compare them with some well known and not so well known, competitors.

Having owners and representatives of the wineries present was extremely helpful in allowing guests to ask questions about wines in general, and winemaking techniques in particular, which they may not often have the chance to do. As a result many will have gone accompanied by a bottle of the Lenz Gold Label home more knowledgeable about the differences in tastes and styles between a stainless steel and a barrel fermented chardonnay, exactly what is meant by the different types of fermentation and exactly what a winemaker looks for while letting wine rest "sur lie" during the manufacturing process.

The afternoon showed again just how far Long Island chardonnays have developed as the local wines stood full comparison with the others on display.

All of those who had bought tickets for this enjoyable event were entered into the prize drawings. One fortunate person was to have a chance to carry out their own tasting of how Lenz compared to a bottle of the classic Le Montrachet, from a vineyard rated by many experts as producing the best white burgundy ised to let me have the results of their tasting and with them a few days after the event. "We were delighted to win this wonderful bottle of wine," Claire told me. "Jim and I have been discussing how to make the best use of this opportunity and in the middle of September we are setting up a blind tasting of the wines with six of our friends. Everyone will rate them on various characteristics and only Jim will

Artist's Studio Tour — End Arts Council August 26, 2000

By Karen M. Lund

Heart, mind and soul are the components for the creative experience with three North Fork artists. Joyce Murrin puts her heart into each unique piece of art, quilting a new pattern through which she draws in the viewer inviting them to open their heart to a new experience. Robert Berkes' mind is a sponge soaking up the personality and humanness of each of his subjects. He challenges the viewer to open his mind to "converse" with the subject of his sculpture, which comes alive with each subtle twist of metal. Ann Shengold asks us to search our souls as she creates participatory arts.

These three accomplished artists were just one part of a studio tour arranged by the East End Arts Council. On Saturday August 26, fifteen artists on the North Fork opened their studios to the public and most were on hand to share their thoughts about the creative process and to interact with tour participants. The tour began in Mattituck and concluded in Orient. The type of art that was represented was eclectic and exciting as well as awe-inspiring and thought provoking.

Working from east to west on the North Fork, a visit to Joyce Murrin's modern, airy home/studio evoked pleasant gasps and warm compliments about the artist and her work. Walking in the front door, the visitor is greeted with vibrant color and designs from completed pieces displayed throughout the hallways. These quilts, which are often a reflection of the artist's environment, were machine-pieced and hand quilted by the artist. Murrin's easy-going, lanky presence gave a human dimension to her colorful quilted creation as she explained her unique method of design. The large, airy room is carefully cluttered with quilted hoops, a large work table, sketches of new designs and finished works. Murrin patiently explained how she transposes her inspirations to paper, drawing templates and selected fabrics. Murrin explains her series of four quilts, each designed using only seven lines, with the artist rotating the geometric design a quarter of a turn to see the lines from a new perspective. Each of the quilts in this series draws from a different color palette and presents a unique aesthetic experience. Murrin muses, "My mind's eye sees a hundred works, even more; my mind can't work that fast.

As you approach Beres' studio, a converted old school house, you are greeted with a larger-than-life sculpture of a buffalo that seems to have energy and a mission. When you meet the artist, you can understand why. Robert Berkes is an artistic experience unto himself. A repository of anecdotes for his over 300 subjects that he has sculpted over the decades, Berkes adds such a human dimension to his work, that it seems to have a life of its own. With the hollowed eyes and every wrinkle and bone put into place, a viewer feels that he is in the presence of such great men as Lincoln, Kennedy and Einstein. Berkes challenges us and himself to live to the beat of the music of our age and to look below the surface of individuals to their souls, in thinking about the creative process. Berkes refers us to Helen Gardner's Art through the Ages in which she observes, "The persistence of art makes the past, the present." Berkes adds that sculpture is the most persistent art form, being the oldest record of individuals. In his works he tries to never let the artistic likeness deviate from the best manner in which he can portray his subject, by neither flattering nor denegrating.

Going from the serious to the whimsical is a trip from Berkes' overwhelming studio to Ann Shengold's small workplace, the Wm. Steeple Davis House in Orient. Shengold recounted the time when her first grade teacher reprimanded her for laughing during the reading of a story about fish while telling a classmate about other imaginary fish, including one in polka dots. This reprimand's impact lasted a very long time since Shengold did not begin her art career until 1995, twenty years after she graduated from college. Shengold shared with her visitors a brief slide show the helped us visualize her participatory art. It's obvious that the artist works to draw us into her art by having us question our principles and morals. When asked about the creative process, Shengold mused it's "something I'm learning about and hope to learn about for the rest of my life.

As tour participants traveled over the fork, they found Mattituck is the home for painter/bookmaker Vincent Torrre, photographer Kathy Kennedy and photographer /printer/bookmaker Barbara Perrino. Torre paints primarily on masonite with oil paints which gives him flexibility to paint loosely or without the rub of a canvas surface. Kennedy is an expert in the field of photographic printing experimenting with chemistry, tones and papers. Perrino hand coats platinum prints, which she sometimes sews into book form and binds in leather.

The creative energy that is generated by these artists on the North Fork is remarkable. Each, in their own way, drew visitors into the art world by having us look us at our surrounding and ourselves with different eyes. Our hearts, minds and souls were creatively engaged.

CLASSIC CARS WITH DAD GEIDED mph) that the stress on the tires must be immense. To put that landing speed into perspective, the average private airplane has a top speed of only around 130 miles

Tires are really in the news these days. It seems a blown tire caused the crash of the Concorde, and Ford and Firestone are doing a PR tap dance trying to explain why people are getting killed while driving Ford Explorer's shod with Firestone tires.

In the case of the Concorde, which I consider to be one of the most significant airplanes built, I truly hope they are back in the air soon. The airplane is so fast; landing and taking off at such a high speed (around 180

I feel sorry for Ford and Firestone and the families who lost loved ones in their tire fiasco. I'm sure there was no coverup, just human engineering error. However, and I've been saying this for years, sport utility vehicles not only look like trucks, but because they have such a high roll center, handle like trucks. Suspicious tires add to this formula for disaster.

I also think that it's rather bizarre that the Ford Motor Car Company is currently blitzing the airways with commercials that feature Jacques Nasser, the President and CEO of Ford. He's apologizing for the tire failure, but why have an Australian represent the great Ford Motor Car Company to the American public.

Don't get me wrong, I have nothing against foreigners, but a Ford is as American as apple pie. The Ford F-150 is the biggest selling vehicle in America. I don't want some Aussi guy coming into my living room and representing this stars and stripes company. And one more gripe, he has a French name, a weird accent and looks like the mean bad guy from the first Mad Max movie.

C'mon Ford, get an American guy as a spokesman. Harrison Ford would be perfect. He was really presidential in "Air Force One" and if your ad agency is really cool, they could do the obvious; a wild creative tie in with his last name.

Tires are probably the most important part of your car, and they've come a long way in the last twenty years. When it comes to driving safety, tires are literally where the rubber meets the road.

Stop reading this story for a few seconds and look down at the palm of your hand. That's about the size of one tire patch as it sits on the ground. Four palm sized pieces of rubber are what holds your car on the road, consider the curves as you careen around them at seventy miles per hour in the rain, on loose gravel and in sleet and snow. Factor in ice, and you have the plot for a horror

Tires today must be good, because cars are getting heavier and faster. But just about twenty-five years ago they were really terrible. The bias ply tires of the 50s were really deadly pieces of rubber. They commonly had blow-outs, squealed like frightened pigs in turns, and in the wet had the adhesion coefficent of a Pam-coated teflon frying pan.

Those '57 Chevy's and '55 T-Birds may look great at car shows, but they were more show than go. By modern car standards, they were dangerous handling rides. No wonder, as the song goes, "Daddy took the T-Bird away."

Michelin invented the steel belted radial tire in 1953, but it wasn't until 1970 when radial tires were offered on every American car. Car racing improves the breed. Race tire technology has crossed over to street tires. Wider, softer road hugging compounds have found their way from the racetrack to the highway.

On Eastern Long Island, especially in the Hamptons, the roads are very slippery after it rains. Be very careful when driving under these conditions. When buying new tires, demand tires with a high traction rating.

The best all around tires for passenger cars are All Season or M & Stires, (Mud and Snow). High performance and sports cars should stay with performance radials that are reccomended by the manufacturer. The next time you're looking at any new tire, check the hieroglyfics on the sidewall of the tire. They tell you all about traction and wear. Ask the dealer to interpret for you.

Today's tires are modern marvels. Because of them, big sedans handle like sports cars and sports cars handle like yesterdays's racing cars. But the best safety device is you, the driver. Know your car's handling limitations, and please use your brain in the rain.

Bob Gelber, an automotive journalist living in the Hamptons, appears frequently on television as an automotive expert. You can email him at remsenburg@aol.com.

Shop 'til You Drop ... With Maria Tennariello

The fall season is upon us and the summer sales are in full swing. I love the summer/fall sales, especially when we get an Indian summer and you can get to wear your late summer wardrobe before next year. So let's do some summer sale shopping!

Starting out in Sag Harbor, I found the deal of the century at mint (yes, all lower case letters) but high end merchandise! Mint is a designer consignment shop for men and women featuring new and gently worn designer clothing and accessories at discount prices. Making room for all the new fall arrivals, mint is slashing prices up to 75% off all their summer merchandise. Look for Gucci bags, Pucci dresses, Hermes leather skirts, Manolo Blahnik shoes, Giorgio Armani suits, Dolce & Gabbana shirts, Chanel jewelry, Prada accessories and much more for your fall wardrobe. Located on Spring Street, behind the Apple Bank in Sag Harbor, hurry before all the good stuff flies out the door or give them a call at 725-mint.

Take a walk on the wild side and stop off at Hedges on Main Street in Sag Harbor for a wonderful selection and collection of tableware, gifts, antiques and interior design. You will be glad you did.

In East Hampton on Newtown Lane check out Eileen Fisher for late summer and fall merchandise that is so comfortable you hardly know you're wearing anything

On Pantigo Road in East Hampton at Devereau Atwell, Ltd., Antiques, Décor and Sundries, semiantiques and Persian rugs, are available at a 20% off . Now that's a nice sale.

At Our Glass on Main Street in Amagansett, there is a summer sale with 20% to 50% off on blown, fused and stained glass from local artisans and from those around the world.

Beach Country on Montauk Highway in Amaganset has new arrivals to choose from. There are wonderful clothing and accessories in light fabrics and deep colors, coordinated separates, tops and sweaters, shawls, scarves, handbags, jewelry, and a new crop of stretch leggings. And...there are regular and plus sizes here too. Look for 50% to 80% off the summer clothing.

Claire Murray Lifestyles at the Fountain Circle on Jobs Lane in Southampton has wonderful woven throws, hand-hooked rugs, wearable art, needle art kits, and great home accessories. This is a fun shop, I recommend it highly.

A quick stop for a quick lunch was next on my agenda...Love the Village Cheese Shop on Main Street in Southampton for homemade soup, gourmet salad and a tasty sandwich. Village Cheese Shop caters dinner parties, does up weekend thank you baskets, and much more. Call them for information about catering at 283-

In Hampton Bays on Montauk Highway, look for a great semi-annual sale from 30% to 60% off designer clothing like DKNY, Laundry, BCBG, Ralph Lauren. Easel, ABS and more... Where? Val's Closet.

While you're in Westhampton Beach, stop in at Annie & Moe Factory Outlet on Riverhead Road and check out the hand painted children's gift and accessories. You will love the hand painted children's furniture that will go well in any children's room. Call for information 288-

Shop you're little hearts out. Until next week. Ciao and Happy Summer Sale Shopping!

Firewalking Isn't Only For A Survivor

By Allison Wiley

Springs resident Bill Bastian spent several days on the remote island in the South China Sea off Borneo, utilized as the site for the hit CBS show Survivor, teaching the three remaining survivors the ancient art of Firewalking in preparation for their final immunity

The challenge, as seen nationwide on CBS during Survivor's grand finale on August 23, involved firewalking for the first time on any network game show. For many cultures, the firewalk is a ritualistic catalyst for personal/spiritual growth and a rite of passage into a whole new chapter of life. The individual walks on a fiery bed of coals that reaches a temperature of over 1200 degrees fahrenheit. During this feat, the fire instructor is crucial to the success of this process and Bill Bastian was all that the survivors could hope for when this test of courage was all that stood between them and a million dollars.

Firewalking is making a big comeback in the guise of corporate motivational and team building workshops. The Firewalk Experience has been instrumental in transforming managers, sales teams and employees of major global companies, small businesses and educational institutions into more productive, efficient and motivated personnel.

Sparks Development cofounders Bill Bastian and Mark Reynolds are more than your average motivational speakers and have created some of the most innovative and unique workshops for corporations around the country. " I teach people how to move past fear and live in their own greatness...I was very happy to help create a personal win for each of the remaining contestants, says Bastian, relating to his part in the Surviror program but, this philosophy is also true of all of their custom-designed corporate programs.

Sparks Development sprang from a vision of Bastion's to use this ancient rite of passage to create modern success at today's corporations. Bastian's vision is not contained within the corporate world but can also be found facilitating workshops within prison reform programs and cancer-hospice programs. You can learn more by contacting Sparks Development at 510-522-2298 or click on their website at www.SparkDevelopment.com.

Sandcastle Building (11 a.m. to 1 p.m.) - Ross Perchik, AIA, is bringing his great contest to Maidstone Beach for all ages.

Field Day At Maidstone Fields (12 noon) - Children and their parents can join in the sack races, baseball game and other fun activities.

Barbeque (12 noon) - This event will be held on the northeast lawn of Gardiner's Marina and is sponsored by Dreesen's.

Historical Walking Tour Of Springs (1:15 p.m.) Hugh King, East Hampton's Town Crier, will tell us about the history of Springs. Meet at the Springs Library.

Snapper Derby (2-4 p.m.) - This event, sponsored by the Harbor Marina, will award prizes for various fish categories on Gann Road. Reservations required.

Free Life (2 p.m.) - Join Genie Henderson at the Springs Presbyterian Church and learn the history of the Free Life.

Gaff Race (3 p.m.) - The start and finish for this race will be the East Hampton Point Observation Point.

Authentic Bonac Clambake (4-6 p.m.) - Steamers, clams, crabs, corn cooked in a pit will be held at Maidstone Beach available on a first come-first served Parade Of Classics (4:30 p.m.) - This event will be held from Three Mile Harbor to Maidstone Park Jetty.

Dance At Springs School (7-9 p.m.) - Join your friends and neighbors for an outdoor dance to the music of the One Man Band.

For information, call Kathy McCormack at 324-7461 or Michelle Seebode at 329-2729.

LET'S GO FOR DRINKS THE CLASSICS

KING COLE ROOM (St. Regis Hotel, 2 East 55th Street) - Nestled in the elegant St. Regis Hotel, this classic bar boasts some of the most notable decor of any City bar. With its unique painted walls depicting the legendary nursury rhythm theme and burnished leather, this bar emits charm. Spicy wasabi peas and mixed nuts at the bar make you feel like royalty. Sit back, enjoy the cocktails and feel like a princess.

FEINSTEIN'S AT THE REGENCY HOTEL (540 Park Avenue) - A tea room from 3-5 p.m., this lounge doesn't actually have a bar, a uniformed server pours drinks from behind a table. You'll find one of the best Cosmopolitan's in the City here and it is known for sophisticated cocktail-sipping and people watching as well as tasty bar snacks including black olives, cheese sticks and spicy seeds. The posh setting provides a reason to get decked out and offers a welcome break from the downtown grit.

NEW BARS

WET BAR (130 Lexington Avenue) - The space is cavenous and the decor so varied that it appears to be three different bars. Take a left and you'll find a stool-filled nook or go to the back and sink into the soft leather couches or go downstairs and sip cocktails over the high-backed black leather chairs. Wherever you go, enjoy the view of beautiful people.

ANOTHEROOM (149 West Broadway) - Despite the concrete, this tiny Tribeca bar achieves an easy cosiness with its sleek decor and comfortable banquettes. Although the clientele is rather "bridge and tunnel", the forty bottles of beer on the wall, not to mention the twelve tap brews, eleven wines and three champagnes offered by the glass should prove an enticement.

AZ (21 West 17th Street) - This three level bar, restaurant and party spot serving Asian-fusion cuisine in the Flatiron district attracts crowds of beaitiful people. The ground floor lounge offers a friendly waitstaff, coaches to cuddle on and a free plate of crispy pappadams (those Indian lentil rounds) for anyone on a bar stool. Be it known that fish makes you smarter, so try the spicy tuna tartare on crispy nori chips. It's excellent. Wash it down with a dark & ztormy, a variation on the Jamaican favorite, a dark and stormy which will keep the storms at bay.

B3 (33 Avenue B) - Upstairs is an elegant fifty seat restaurant/bar which serves mediterranean food and downstairs is a small lounge called Kitten. They have an excellent wine menu and a cocktail list that includes a decadent cocktail of their own making-a B3 bomber which is a Long Island ice tea with champagne not Coke. After midnight-munchies include openface beef tenderloin sandwiches and zucchini fritters. Food served until 2 a.m.

BAR EAST (1733 First Avenue) - A down to earth kind of drinking establishment with two pool tables and two dartboards and a good selection of imports on tap not to mention domestic brews for only three dollars. They even have a fully stocked, rentable basement space for private parties.

CHAOS (225 East Houston Street)- The overindulgent spirit of Studio 54 is alive and living in this place. This multi-room establishment features hypnotic dance music, disco lights, and the champagne flows as you dance the night away.

DAKOTA ROADHOUSE (43 Park Place) - This western themed saloon in Tribeca is reason enough to mosey over to this bar and kick back with a brew. The in-crowd is part Wall Street, part blue collar, and the jukebox resonates with country and western music. The kitchen cranks out great ribs, steaks and mashed potatoes. They also serve the best brews in the City. starting at $3 a mug and you can chase it down with a "Jack", pard'ner.
PUBS WITH GRUB

BEACON (25 West 56th Street)-Once the afterwork crowd rolls in, you are lost in a sea of pinstripes. The fruits of Beacon's wood-burning oven are worth the trip as chef Waldy Malof subjects almost all that he serves from bread to dessert (even salad) to his ovensearing heat. Try a martini and the sublimely smoked oysters, the roast suckling pig or the Argentine steak.

FIVE POINTS (31 Great Jones Street) - This Mediterranean - American spot draws a thirty something crowd of dot.commers and a smattering of straitlaced suits. Try the rich mussels and the daily fish specials with an ambitious selection of wines by the glass and a vast array of draft beers (the Otter Creek stout is worth a try). The feeling is relaxed and mellow; the perfect place to sit and survey the Village crowd.

ICON (W Court Hotel, 130 East 39th Strteet)- Cool and dim, with lots of black and brushed steel, this new stop attracts a clientele ranging from young execs and their galmorous dates to hotel guests who are instantly recognizable. A full menu is avaiable at the bar if you can enjoy youur food over the din of the L'ACTUEL (145 East 50th Street) - This spacious brasserie attracts businessmen as well as hip Europeans. This establishment serves "french tapas". Try the rich fricassee of kidney in cherry vinegar, the crabmeat cocktail or an appetizer portion of the escargot. Space is limited at the black marble-topped bar so more expansive meals, also served at the bar, may be difficult to manage. However, if you have enough of the excellent sauvignon blanc you might not care if others invade your space.

METRAZUN (Grand Central Terminal) - Sprawling across Grand Central 's East Balcony, this is the latest hot spot for the Metro North set. Head for the long communal table or one of the low-slung chairs at the bar in the back, where the terminal frenzy is less noticable. Choose from three different dishes for the "lounge plate" including lobster spring rolls, Maine crab and avocado salad and butter-cured King salmon. Or try the wood-oven flatbreads with a variety of toppings. Finish with a gentle cabarnet and bask in the knowledge that you have alternate transportation

BEST AFTERNOON BARS

THE CUB ROOM BAR (131 Sullivan Street)-Relax on the coaches, park yourself on a stool or cozy up to a table at this elegant but easy bar with the tall, chilled glasses and the fine draft beers. In the evening it is very busy but at lunch you can escape the fray and bask in the glorious sun that pours through the bar's huge windows

LANDMARK TAVERN (626 Eleventh Avenue) -Lovers of riverside charm will find this 1865 English-Irish establishment located a few blocks from the waterfront charming. Anchored by its original mahogany bar, this landmark tavern has only made a few concessions to modern times. Great for a few drinks on your way to a nd from the Convention Center, but out of the way ordinarily.

SWIFT HIBERIAN LOUNGE (34 East 4th Street) More than eighty bottled beers and twenty six choices on tap make this bar a favorite for beer lovers. The feeling is decidedly Irish and you might just be able to float away to the Emerald Isle on the suds.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"THE NATURE OF SEEING" AND "THE GAZE" AT THE PARRISH

The Parrish Art Museum has taken on one of its most ambitious exhibits in recent years. "The Art of Seeing" is a subject that's comprehensive as well as multidisciplinary, one which may take years to develop effectively. The Parrish probably did not have years or even months to do any such thing. The show's limited perspective, therefore, is determined by the Museum's own collection (which is quite good).

This is not a criticism, per se. The idea of using selections from the private collection in this way is imaginative and resourceful. We only wish the concept could go farther and not be bound necessarily by inhouse works alone.

While the art on display "played with the idea of the grid, window and mirror," these categories (while credible) seem too specific and not philosophical enough for this critic. Why not categorize the nature of seeing as perceptions of reality: representational vs. abstraction (and other perceptions that fall in-between these extremes)?

As it stands now, however, there are some fallacies with the current classifications. For instance, the window/mirror signification is not always applicable. Consider Fairfield Porter's painting, "Portrait of a Girl," where the subject is standing by a window. Does this piece automatically qualify as an example of the "reality beyond... and a mirror of the interior world that is the domain of the artist?" Could it possibly be that Mr. Porter simply uses the window because it was there in the room?

And if the former interpretation is true, what does it say about the artist's world vision, if anything. To say that the window became a "gridded template of the reality beyond and a mirror of the interior world" is saying nothing we don't already assume about the functions of a window/ mirror.

Barbara Bloom's installation, "The Gaze," is more to the point regarding the nature of seeing, suggesting how an art object (her photographs) can assume qualities (like blushing in this exhibit) evoked by the viewer. It's a fascinating concern— the process of interaction between the viewer and the object viewed.

There's a famous movie experiment done by a well-known Russian filmmaker that proves the early preoccupation with this interaction. A series of shots was shown to viewers: a man's face alternating with various images of meat, flowers, etc. Spectators were asked to describe the subject's face. After the food image, the participants swore the man looked hungry. Of course, he didn't look hungry at all. The face was always the same; the viewer alone was responsible for the perceived alterations on the face.

The moral of the story? Ms. Bloom's photographs didn't change (blush) either. We only thought they did, just like we perceive changes in Op Art or in portraits by Chuck Close.

(Naturally, some performance art can literally change as a result of audience interaction.)

The Parrish Museum show will be on view until Sept.

Honoring the Artist: Romero Britto

Artist Romero Britto has had both an interesting past and continuing present, ones that are truly international in nature. Yet it's apparent that he still feels at home in America. Consider the fact that, although he was born and raised in Recife, Brazil, Mr. Britto came to the United States in 1987 at the age of twenty-two. Settling in Florida, he quickly adjusted to his new country, finding Flordia's warm climate and tropical setting compatible with Brazil.

Mr. Britto also connected to Miami Beach's art community, particularly the gallery scene situated on Lincoln Road where he established a studio/gallery. (This critic remembers fondly a trip to the same Lincoln Road a few years ago, a colorful and energetic area filled with working artists/ galleries. Especially impressive was the South Florida Arts Center where people could rent space for a minimal amount.)

Asked to describe his studio, Mr. Britto is colorful and energetic as well. "I have plenty of room, 10,000 square feet right next to the Arts Center," he explains. "I had to fix it up when I first moved in. Now the space has white walls, with Chinese red, yellow, blue and silver. There are polka dots on the walls."

Polka dots? Somehow that description seems to fit right in with Mr. Britto's playful work, influenced by Pop Art, cartoons and Disney. "I grew up with art on my mind. As a kid I would go to museums and the movies. I loved Disney's Fantasia, Mickey Mouse and the TV cartoon, The Flintstones. My son loves The Flintstones, too." (Even with these purely American influences, Mr. Britto says his favorite artists include Picasso and Matisse.)

Mr. Britto also likes to surround himself with aspects of other international cultures as well. "My studio is filled with all kinds of unusual furniture like an Eighteenth Century table and chairs from Spain. My home has a Mediterranean style with palm trees, plants and a garden."

While Mr. Britto's worldwide connection can be seen via the European, American, and Asian galleries where he exhibits, his images are also universal in nature: prints featuring, for example , whimsical flowers, cats, fish, and fruit. There's a spirit of "joie-de-vivre" apparent, too, where fish kiss each other and couples dance with abandonment.

But Mr. Britto conveys another side in his various charitable endeavors (he went to law school wanting to be a diplomat before he entered the art world). Thus, he devotes his time and talent to such associations as the American Red Cross and London's Ormand Street Children's Hospital. It's apparent that even in these activities, Mr. Britto is exercising his international interests.

-Marion Wolberg Weiss

Guy de Fraumeni's HOL

in The Hamptons

Becalmed here in the brilliant, big peacefulness of Victoria, British Columbia . . . the noisy but puny little names like Gore and Bush, pale pitifully as compared to the silent colorful appellations here like Galloping Goose, which is not an agile athlete. It is, instead, a winding trail on the Peninsula. Back there, in the States, in that mad-dash, galloping Gallup Pole race for the Presidency, those clumsy, (tripping-over-theirown-tongues) short distance runners are given sports figure similitudes by the media. I suppose it is O.K., because, as in sports, no matter how inept the contenders... one will be a winner. I will say the same for the current rocky, Rocky-style movie, The Replacements. It is difficult to not like a movie that tries so hard to be liked. I cannot say the same for the presidential candidates

THROWING UNDERDOGS A BONE

Rifling through other "Losers as Winners" films... this football version about Victorious Bums can't hold a candle to its closest relative, The Longest Yard, which featured Burt Reynolds as an imprisoned, clobbered convict who pulls together a Dirty Dozen of other inmates into a winning football team to beat a corrupt penal system. Burt did this with patched, padded shoulder guards and a tousled toupee. Keanu Reeves does pretty much the same thing. (yes, Keanu Reeves!) as a quarterback with a bunch of rag tags as replacements (actually scabs) for the 1987 striking football stars, portrayed in this movie as multi-millionaires holding out for more millions. Keanu does this with the same shoulder guards (albeit, loose fitting) and slow motion, bouncing long hair (his own) ... all with the guidance of their tough, sainted coach, Gene Hackman. Both stars' hair dressers are given closing credits even though Mr. Hackman has almost no hair. Interestingly, Keanu's love interest (such as it is), Ms. Brooke Langston, has no hair dresser credit. How times have changed! but, not the story line and phrases encapsuled here-in. Mr. Hackman's, hackneyed now, revisiting his fine role in Hoosiers, reiterating lines like, "Winners want the ball" and "This is a rough game" and, adding some sexism... "That's why girls don't play it." But, the women have plenty to do as cheerleaders, shaking their pompoms and fleshy parts.

FOOTBALL AS COACHED BY THE THREE STOOGES

I imagine, for the sake of comic violence, the bodies of the motley team of strike breakers lean heavily towards corpulence. Rappers Michael Taliferro and Faison Love, as body guards turned pistol packing ball players, weigh almost as much as tanker-size, sumo wrestler, Ace Yonamine. Big and brutal, Jon Favreau, as an ex-L.A. cop-who tips the scales of justice too far. Scrawny, Rhys Ifans, weighing in at about 100 lbs, in the same jockey shorts he wore in Notting Hill, is just as stealthy at stealing the movie from the heavyweights. Orlando Jones, is the slim wide receiver who trains in the hood, racing from getting caught for petty theft. He does much for uniting the team in an Electric Slide dance routine to . . . you guessed it . . . Gloria Gaynor's favored movie theme song, "I Will Survive." Why should this movie try to be different music-wise?

THE OLD ONE-TWO

Giving the play-by-plays and also narrating the carnage and a love scene, too, are those old, old, old TV guys, John Madden and Pat Summerall (in the winter of their discombobulence). Garrulously, book-ending the movie, is that crusty, man-about-the-East-End, Jack Warden... proving again that there are no small roles... only small movies. The Replacements will not have a very long shelf life so, I suggest you get that good feeling from watching un-housebroken, underdogs win the day... right away, for it will soon go into the freezer spaces of VIDEO TAPE! where lie The Longest Yard and Ronald Reagan's "Gipper" touchdown gripper. Never the less, I'll sidestep the Presidential games of popularity as opposed to sportsmanship and capability for more serious matters. Here, in Replacements, we have a movie about romanticizing strike breakers made by staunch SAG actors and IATSE film crew-members! But, who is playing in sports for the sport of it or the honor of it? Even that boy wonder star, Tiger Woods crossed a picket line to do a commercial. This year, Hollywood faces strikes by the Screen Actors Guild and the Writer's Guild... golly! Will everyone have as much unbridled fun?

A TOUCHING TOUCHDOWN

The Replacements cheerful ending threw away an opportunity to tackle the beefy serious subject of the 1987 football strikes that could have added a lot of weight to its predictable weightless frivolities. I am not implying that a bigger shouldered actor, too, might have made a better movie. Keanu Reeves fits the misfit film. His character, the failed young football star, who works off his boat, isn't even a fisherman . . . he merely scrapes barnacles off other boats. The situation, boats and location, Seattle, Washington, are close to home here in B.C., catching the audiences' attention . . . however, the thin little point of it all, slid through the net.

While the major cultural centers here take a week to recover from a hectic summer, there are still good entertainments about. Patricia Watt's Manhattan Drama Collective will give a new-play reading in East Hampton on Saturday, there's an all-day Bamboo Festival at East Hampton's LongHouse Reserve, and a regatta of historic boats sails from Sag Harbor to Greenport on Saturday. The South Fork Craftmen's Guild has a show in Water Mill on Saturday and Sunday, Norman Podhoretz will read from his new memoir on Saturday, and author Peter Matthiessen will speak in Hampton Bays next Thursday.

Guild Hall still has the Willem de Kooning art exhibit through October 8, and Southampton's Parrish Art Museum shows some of the major works from its collection through September 17.

THEATER.

Producer Patricia Watt and the Manhattan Drama Collective will offer a reading of playwright Joe Pintauro's play in development, Karma Boomerang, on Saturday at 4 p.m. The story concerns a playwright who loses his wife and work to another man. Manhattan actors doing the reading are Michael Nader, Dex Dexter, Larry Pine, Rebecca Roberts and Jacqueline Murphy. The site is the Mulford Farm barn on the East Hampton village green (10 James Lane) and tickets are $20 at the gate. A reception with the cast follows the reading.

This weekend, the musical action is at local clubs and restaurants. There's reggae with Toots & The Maytals at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Friday, Wolfe then Ladee-in-the-House on Saturday. Bridgehampton, there's mellow jazz on Friday evening at Kiplings, hotter bands Thursday through Saturday at The Wild Rose, and dance music at Bridges on weekends (plus the Sunday gospel brunch). Stefanie Cardinali, Paul Gene and Rick Salter perform swing music at Montauk's Oyster Pond on Friday. Hansom House in Southampton has live performances on weekends.

Norman Podhoretz will speak about his memoir, My Love Affair with America, at Book Hampton, East Hampton on Saturday at 5:30 p.m. Canios' Books, Sag Harbor, is taking a weekend breather from hosting readings. Next Thursday, September 14, the Moby Dick reading marathon begins at Sag Harbor's John Jermain Library. The entire Melville classic will be read publicly by volunteers between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. through Saturday. Call the library at (631) 725-0049 if you are interested in being a reader.

Novelist, conservationist and nonfiction author Peter Matthiessen is the guest speaker at the Friends of the Hampton Bays Public Library's annual book-and-author luncheon next Thursday, 12:30 p.m., at Indian Cove Restaurant. Tickets are $22 and include the program, lunch and gratuity. Call (631) 728-6241 by September 11 to reserve a seat.

SPECIAL EVENTS

GET YOUR MOTOR RUNNING!

Has your car stopped fulfilling her part of the bargain? Are you thinking that it might be time to trade old Stella in for a newer, younger model? Dreaming about buying the car that you fondly call "the one" but having nightmares about the financing? Believe it or not, the Internet can answer all your car buying questions. Heck, you can even custom design and purchase a car without ever stepping into a dealership. Check out these sites below for all your car buying needs www.autoadvice.com- Buying your first car? The inexperienced buyer will leave this site brimming with confidence and knowledge about the car buying industry. The logical table of contents goes through the car buying process step by step, starting with "first things first" and ending with "warranties." Autoadvice.com is so honest and accurate that you will be convinced that it must be authored by born-again car salespeople.

SHOPPING AROUND:

www.edmunds.com- "Where smart car buyers start" is this site's accurate slogan for the services that it provides. Click on the model of the car you are interested in and be amazed with all the information that pops up. Listings of prices, safety feature, fair consumer comments, and approximate insurance costs are well reviewed and fair. This site is an excellent place to comparison shop and become an educated consumer.

DUMPING STELLA:

www.carsmart.com- Need to sell your lemon in order to purchase that dream car? Carsmart.com touts itself as the "largest on-line automotive network." be worth your while to advertise in their classifieds for a small fee that is refunded if your car is not purchased within thirty days. Be sure to utilize their free quoting service and dealership locater.

www.autotrader.com- A similar site to carsmart.com, autotrader.com has a humongous listing of used cars for sale. Whether on the buying or selling end, this site will satisfy all in the used car market. See the car parts section for hard-to-find equipment and accessories for that old lemon you refuse to let go.
FINANCING YOUR NEW CAR:

www.lendingtree.com-Complete a simple application and have lenders competing for your business. This site makes it simple to figure out the financing aspect of purchasing a car. Don't miss the Lending Tree Resource Center for lots of helpful advice and answers to frequently asked questions.

www.creditland.com-With the goal of uncomplicating the complicated loan process, this helps clear things up for the first time car buyer. In just fifteen seconds, creditland.com can give you an idea of the types of loans you can qualify for and guide you to the next step. This is a great site to check out for clear answers and explanations to a sometimes foggy area in car buying. BUYING AND MAINTAINING:

www.driveoff.com- Don't be put off when asked for your zip code immediately upon entering the site, that is how the price quoting begins before giving you the option of purchasing the vehicle online. Offering an alternative from dealerships and even the option not to buy directly from the vehicle's website, this is 100% online car shopping.

www.cartalk.com- Paired with NPR's radio show "car talk," this site is as amusing and comprehensive as they come. As silly as the site may appear, don't underestimate the actual information provided, it's legit. Cartalk.com offers advice on subjects such as how to make the most of your junkyard visit and how to be treated fairly at a dealership. Be sure to send a "dope slap" to one of your best enemies!

Jazz At Cordes

A Frenchman, by the name of Charles Wizen, is one of the best interpreters anywhere, of the "Hot Club of France," featuring Django Reinhardt and Stephen Grapelli of the 1930's.

Wizen, who played with Django, is originally from Paris, and is one of the world's great jazz violinists; his music sometimes referred to as "Djangology." His latest recording (and his third), has just hit music stores, showing off his unique style, from the Hot Club of France repertoire to American Jazz standards to Wizen's own compositions

Since the 1950's, the group, "Jazz a Cordes" (jazz with strings), reminisces the romantic era of the French Quarter in the 30's. Other artists Mr. Wizen performs with are the great guitarist Serge Krief from Paris, Richard Chiche, best rhythm guitarist, and J.F. Martel, one of the most sought after bass players, from Quebec.

Wizen has been playing all his life, but started playing jazz once he hit his teens. He studied at the French Conservatory in Paris, and is presently a jazz violin professor at a prestigious university in New York.

He carries his swinging jazz distinction into a most recently formed string quintet, consisting of violin, viola, cello, guitar, and bass. The other group he performs with is a more traditional quartet of violin, piano, bass

Thousands of people are enjoying Wizen's creative concerts, as Jazz a Cordes has performed in a variety of locations, from libraries and hotels to supper clubs, from the country to the city, to the Newport Jazz festival, to NBC and CBS television. They also performed at one of Mayor Giulliani's New Year's Eve Balls.

"I've played five times already (incognito) at Dan's Kite Flying Contest. And my partner at this last contest was guitarist, Lou Messana, who played for Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand, and Tony Bennett. You never know whom you'll find on the beach," he says.

He is a true echo of Paris that you will not want to miss. Oooh- la- la. Janet Berg

silvia lehrer's cooking column

While Labor Day Weekend unofficially calls the summer season to a close, the fresh abundance of the late season harvest continues to spill over at farm stands with summer squash, zucchini, eggplant, corn and tomatoes.

Lots and lots of tomatoes, from fully ripened miniature plums to slowly roast with olive oil, coarse salt and fresh herbs, to big beefy ones to simply slice, drizzle with a fruity olive oil, julienne of basil and a touch of coarse salt. Life can be simply delicious and nutritious with this vitamin packed fruit. The tomato, botanically speaking, is a berry, although it is eaten and mostly used in cooking as a vegetable.

Each filling a different niche, here are three recipes so suitable to the season. A platter of sliced tomatoes topped with a tangy avocado dressing is tasty and attractive. Summer herb and tomato soup is redolent with the fragrance and fresh taste of aromatic herbs, and the classic Italian salad, panzanella is a glorious mix of ripe tomatoes, crusty Tuscan bread, sparkling fresh basil and a fine olive oil.

Vine-ripened, local tomatoes are one of the joys of the season, no matter how they are served.

TOMATO SALAD WITH AVOCADO DRESSING

What perfect timing for this do-ahead salad with vine-ripened tomatoes topped with a guacomole-style dressing.

Serves 6-8

1 ... a avocado
1/2 cup light mayonnaise
1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
1-2 tablespoons grated onion
2 tablespoons chapped scalling

2 tablespoons chopped scallion, white and green Dash Worcestershire sauce

Coarse kosher salt and freshly ground pepper

1 medium size red onion, cut into paper thin slices 2-3 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley

1 tablespoon red wine vinegar

2-3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

3 large ripe beefsteak tomatoes

Snipped chives for garnish

- 1. Cut avocado in half and remove pit. Scoop out flesh into workbowl of food processor fitted with steel knife or a blender and puree. Add mayonnaise, lemon juice, grated onion, chopped scallion, and Worcestershire. Process or blend to mix, scraping down sides with a rubber spatula as necessary. Season the mixture with salt and pepper to taste. Can be prepared up to one day ahead to this point. Refrigerate, covered in a suitable container until ready to use.
- 2. When ready to serve, scatter thinly sliced onion rings on the bottom of a serving platter, top with chopped parsley and sprinkle lightly with oil and vinegar. Cut tomatoes into 1/2-inch slices and arrange, overlapping slightly, over the onions. Top each tomato with a dollop of avocado dressing and sprinkle with snipped chives. Serve at room temperature.

PANZANELLA

The classic Italian bread salad, panzanella is a glorious mixture of ripe tomatoes, pieces of stale Tuscan bread, aromatic basil and fragrant olive oil. Adapted from Giuliano Bugialli's The Fine Art of Italian Cooking. Giuliano strongly advises that only a Tuscan dark bread be used and that it be stale.

Serves 6-8

1 medium red onion, thinly sliced

1 pound stale, dark Tuscan bread

3 pounds fully ripe fresh tomatoes

1/2 cup julienne of fresh basil (about 18-20 large leaves)

1 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt

Freshly ground pepper

6 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

2-3 tablespoons red wine vinegar

To Serve

12-16 fresh basil leaves) optional

- 1. Peel onion, slice thin and soak in bowl of cold water for 10-15 minutes. Drain and squeeze dry in a clean kitchen towel.
- 2. Meanwhile cut bread into chunks to yield about 10-12 cups and put into a bowl of cold water to cover just long enough to wet thoroughly. Strain in a colander and squeeze dry in your hands. Put in a large mixing bowl.

- 3. Wash, trim and chop tomatoes into small 1/2 -inch pieces. Add onions and tomatoes to the bread. Tear each basil leaf into 2-3 pieces and add to the bowl. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 2-3 hours.
- 4. Before serving, season the mixture with salt, pepper, oil and vinegar and toss mixture to carefully distribute the ingredients. Serve with additional basil leaves, if desired.

SUMMER HERB AND TOMATO SOUP

A treat to look forward to from August through October when tomatoes are naturally vine-ripened and herbs are abundant. Prepare up to several days ahead for flavors to develop. Serves 6-8

3 1/2 pounds ripe tomatoes

3 tablespoons light olive oil

1 tablespoons unsalted butter

2 cloves garlic, finely chopped

1 large onion, finely chopped

1/3 cup finely chopped Italian flat-leaf parsley

1/3 cup basil leaves cut into julienne

2-3 tsp. fresh thyme leaves

2 teaspoons summer savory

1 small jalapeno pepper, seeds removed and cut into tiny dice

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper 1 1/2-2 cups chicken broth (preferably homemade) Whole fresh basil leaves for garnish (optional)

- 1. Plunge tomatoes, a few at a time, into a saucepan of boiling water for 30 seconds. Remove with slotted spoon and when cool enough to handle slip off skins with tip of a paring knife. Continue until all are done. Cut tomatoes in half crosswise, squeeze gently to discard seeds. Chop coarsely.
- 2. Heat oil and butter in a large saucepan. Add garlic and onions and saute for a minute or two, until tender but not brown. Add tomatoes, herbs, jalapeno and seasonings. Stir to mix and simmer covered for ten minutes. Stir in broth, then simmer with cover ajar for 15 minutes longer. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Serve hot or chilled with fresh basil leaf garnish, if desired.

Note: Refrigerate in suitable container, if preparing ahead. Reheat to warm or serve slightly chilled.

OPUS ONE PREMIER AT THE PLAZA CAFÉ On Sunday, October 15th at 7 p.m., chef/owner Douglas Gulija of The Plaza Cafe (283-9323) in Southampton will host a very special dinner to celebrate the premier East Coast uncorking of the Opus One 1997 release. For the special evening, Chef Gulija has planned a four-course dinner (plus dessert) that will feature a mini-vertical tasting of the '89, '90 and '97 Opus One releases. Opus One wine is a joint venture between Robert Mondavi of California and Baroness Philippine de Rothschild of Chateau Mouton Rothschild in France. The Opus One partnership produces a single wine: Opus One. Additional wine pairings from the Mondavi and Chateau Mouton Rothschild vineyards will also accompany the meal. An Opus One representative will be on hand to pour and discuss the wine. The evening's CHEF PROFILE: Michael Castino - Pacific East Michael hails from a long line of culinary professionals. His love of fine Asian food started at a young age when his father took him on frequent trips to Chinatown to find exotic ingredients for the evening's meal. After serving in the Marine Corps., he graduated from the New York Restaurant School in 1987. He worked under chef Kerry Simon at Cafe Grecco in New York City, then went on to apprentice under chef Jean-Georges Vongerichten. Past stints also include time spent at China Grill, Tavern on the Green, Googie's Italian Diner and Pacific Time in South Beach. As co-owner of Pacific East, Michael has held the position of executive chef since the restaurant opened in '97. This year, for the first time, Pacific East will remain open throughout the off-season.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

What do you do when it rains in the Hamptons and you're visiting for only a short period of time? It's a nightmare. Of course, you must do something that lifts your spirits, like going to the Ram's Head Inn, as we did one overcast Sunday afternoon for brunch.

Ram's Head Inn, located on Big Ram Island, about a fifteen minute drive northeast of the Shelter Island's historical district, is owned by James and Linda Eklund, who have had over twenty years of experience and are also proprietors of the Chequit Inn. No wonder they're sticklers for good accommodations and fine food.

How to get there? If you're not going by boat, take the ferry from Sag Harbor. And if you need help with directions, ask one of the crew for a map. Don't be apprehensive. The trip is delightful, with scenic views of Coecles Harbor and good roadways through lush wooded landscapes leading to your destination.

As soon as we arrived we were greeted by Judy, manager of the restaurant, who escorted us to an inside table near open French doors with light filtering through the leaves which created an abstract pattern and provided a pleasant breeze to cool us. I playfully said, "We wouldn't swim from Sag Harbor, but suppose we came by boat? Are there docking facilities?" She responded, smiling, "Only on a first come, first serve basis." So, if you're a boat person, be sure to make a reservation and get there early.

Although we had been there several times before, I was again impressed by the restaurant's informal el-

Wednesday, the 22nd, was a very special day. The final episode of my favorite show Survivor was on, so, I decided to go out to dinner and celebrate. I pointed my car towards Montauk, and away I went to the Surfside Inn. I had been meaning to dine there for a long time, and I thought that this would be the appropriate occasion. I called ahead and made reservations with host Joan Langelosi. On the way, I could tell that the weather was about to become wicked; this however, just added to the Survivor mood I was in.

When I arrived at the restaurant, I was greeted by valet parking attendant Ander Sarragola. He quickly shuttled my car away as I ran inside to get out of the downpour. Joan met me at the door and promptly offered me a selection of several tables. I choose a small table for one that overlooked the room and faced the ocean. The room was buzzing with activity, smiling faces, and laughter. I noticed a lot of families and couples dining. Dining at the table next to me was the Palm Family. I introduced myself to them and asked what they were individually eating. Teddy, who was twelve, had the jumbo shrimp with linguine. He said that he never had seafood before, but liked it a lot. Indeed he did, the plateful was near gone and it was as large as his head. His brother, Robbie, had shrimp scampi. This was his first taste of seafood as well, and he was only eleven. After their meal they played tic-tac-toe and hangman on the disposable place mat. They did not finish the game however. Here is what was left of the puzzle: S_RFSID_ INN.

My waitress was Maggie Moloney. She had a wonderful Irish accent and was very helpful with the menu. I ordered a bowl of their award winning New England clam chowder to start off with. It was very rich and creamy. It was the traditional type of chowder, that warms up your heart and soul. Next, I ordered the Surfside's baked clams. They were great, and their top of the line ingredients were evident. The fresh local clams, extra virgin Italian olive oil, garlic, and basil, were eagerly gulped down by this reviewer.

Later, I was introduced to the manager, Linda Miller. Linda was very polite and helpful with questions I had about the menu, the restaurant, the inn (up stairs), and its history. The rooms are about $85 during the summer, and about $65 after Labor Day. They have ten rooms in total, five of which have shared bath. I also found out that the owner, Thomas Milne, has owned the inn

egance - perfect for everyone: lovers, newlyweds, families,

The Brunch menu had some enticing "Starters" such as traditional shrimp cocktail, roasted littleneck clams with green pepper pesto, ($11 each,) crab cakes with avocado and cilantro aioli ($13), oysters on the half shell ($12), and soup of the day ($7). After some debate, my companion ordered the crab cakes, I, the spinach soup with nutmeg and freshly ground pepper. We also ordered mixed green salads ($7), and for entrees, eggs benedict ($13) and blackened flounder ($13). For drinks, we ordered a Bloody Mary.

My companion thought the crab cakes - though not the Maryland variety she was accustomed to, were great. I enjoyed my spinach soup, finding that the nutmeg and touch of pepper added a special, zesty flavor.

Our attentive waitress, Rachel, soon served us our salads and entrees. As we chatted with her, she told us that she was a resident of Shelter Island, left to go to college, then returned. She loved everything about the Island—including the Inn. It was easy to understand why.

As to our entrees, my companion commented that the eggs benedict were perfect, enhanced by a fruit garnish which included raspberries, strawberries and a slice of orange. I was pleased with my blackened flounder, served with rice and a spicy aioli over mesclun. My only complaint is that I didn't expect the flounder to be so highly spiced and hot. But I'm sure, many would wish to have it that way.

Although the servings were ample, we decided to have coffee and dessert made by the restaurant. My companion raved about her mandarin sorbet, flavored with cinnamon and a slice of orange. Forgetting about calories, I greatly enjoyed the luscious cheesecake.

If you decide on dinner, there are a great variety of dishes to consider, such as grilled Mahi-Mahi ($24), herb seared fillet of salmon ($23), cracked whole cold water lobster "Mediterranean" ($35), Long Island duck ($26), and others

It's easy to understand why Ram's Head Inn is highly rated in this area and is listed as "One of America's 'favorite places to kiss', Zagat 1998."

When you're ready, call for reservations and also ask about the current "specials."

If you're thinking of staying over, keep in mind that the Inn has seventeen rooms overlooking large shading oaks, dogwoods and rhododendrons. And if you're into boating, the Inn offers two 13' O'Day sloops, two sunfish, a peddle boat and a two-man kayak for guests to enjoy at its 800 foot beachfront.

and restaurant for about eighteen years. The inn is a stone's throw from the beach, and located off of Old Montauk Highway.

Following the clams, I had their famous rack of ribs with homemade sauce. The ribs were very delicious and managable. Normally, at other restaurants, I get sauce everywhere, and need ten handi-wipes and a lobster bib - but not this time. The meat was tender, and it easily came off the bone with my fork. The ribs were glazed with a delicious homemade mango sauce.

Following Teddy's example, I ordered the jumbo shrimp and broccoli with red peppers, garlic, white wine, olive oil and linguine. The plate was beautifully presented and drew the attention of other diners. That's what was interesting about this restaurant, people oohed and ahhed when plates were brought out. While I was dining, I overheard several people say: "Boy, that looks good, and ooh, look at that.'

After dinner, I had the pleasure of meeting Chef Danny Kosware. Danny studied under French/Hispanic Chef Leo Dnardo. Danny gave me a tour of the kitchen and an insight into the workings there. The kitchen was immaculate, and its staff was very cheerful. I found out that the secret to his cooking is using fresh ingredients, and not to over do things. In his opinion, if things are fresh, they taste good naturally. I also found out that all the seafood is bought locally at Gosman's market.

The Surfside Inn is a great place to go for dinner, spend a couple of days, and relax. It is the type of place where locals and tourists go to enjoy New England cuisine and hospitality. Here you can enjoy the best of everything, a first rate wine selection, cozy rooms, good food for breakfast, lunch and dinner and a safe place to relax. Check inn and enjoy.

*Drivers notes: Head east on either Rt. 27 or Rt. 114; I prefer Rt. 114. Before you get to Montauk, bare right onto Old Montauk Highway. Slow Down! The speed limit is 35 mph, and if you exceed it, your car might leave the payement.

About me: I have worked in restaurants throughout my life. Initially, I thought it was a good way to earn an honest buck. I started off as a ceramic technician (Dishwasher); then I moved up into the world of prep cooking; then worked as dessert chef; and finally worked as a cook. In the view of this writer, there is nothing more pleasing and harmonious than the symphony of conversation over silverware on dinner plates.

Would You Like To Have A Movie Star's Smile?

Actors and models have long recognized the value of bleaches out stains like a deep cleaning. The trays are a winning smile. As teeth yellow and wear with age and stain with coffee, tea, cigarettes and many foods, celebrities and the general public alike, have sought to regain their "winning smiles" through cosmetic denistry.

You may have noticed some of your friends with whiter and brighter smiles. Tooth whitening has become even more popular in recent years as a simple cosmetic improvement. Discolored teeth may be whitened at home in just a few weeks. Stains are removed from the enamel of your teeth by wearing a custom-fitted tray over your teeth. An oxidizing gel placed in the tray worn for thirty minutes twice a day; immediately they begin to whiten.

I'm often asked about the safety of this process which is best explained by its genesis. It was developed by a periodontist who recommended glyoxide, an over-thecounter oxidizing gel, to patients prior to gum surgery. The oxidizing gel kills bacteria encouraging soft tissue health. For more efficacious treatment, he fabricated a custom-fitted tray which brought the gel into more intimate contact with the teeth and gums and proved more advantageous than simple brushing. The result was that patients returned with whiter teeth and tooth whitening was discovered.

The difference between lazer and power bleaching, both in-office procedures, is mainly that they remove the stain more quickly than home bleaching. The power bleach is stronger and requires in office supervision and the lazer method is used to activate the gel which further speeds up the process. However, the end result is the same making the at-home method of bleaching the most cost effective.

Some stains caused by the use of tetracycline for various childhood diseases, is resistant to external bleaching and is more suitably treated with porcelain laminate veneers.

Porcelain laminate veneers are the ultimate in "smile makeover". If you have spaced, crooked, chipped, worn or discolored teeth or you are unhappy with your smile, you may be interested in porcelain laminate veneers—a perfect smile in two visits. An impression of your teeth is taken at the first visit; porcelain covers are made for your front teeth correcting all imperfections and bonded at the second visit.\

In one week you can have a perfect smile. Porcelain veneers are a beautiful and simple way to solve the problems of space, crooked or chipped teeth and can even lengthen teeth which are too short or have worn with age. They resist wear, stain and discoloration better than bonding and are less expensive and more conservative than capping. Usually there is very little drilling and it may be done without needles. A properly shaped, fitted and bonded porcelain crown or veneer is the most aesthetic method of restoring the health, strength and appearance of fractured and worn teeth as well as teeth weakend by root canal therapy.

Bleaching, bonding, tooth colored fillings, reshaping of teeth and minor tooth movement with removable invisible applainces complete the armementarium of the cosmetic dentist.

These tools make it possible to provide you with the smile of your dreams. Think of Julia Roberts and you imagine her smiling. What has that smile done for her life and her career? If a movie star's smile is one of your dreams it can become a reality with modern cosmetic dentistry.

In-Office Chemotherapy at Risk!

New Government Proposal Would Result in Loss of Quality Cancer Care

The ability of physicians to provide chemotherapy in their own offices to patients on Medicare is under imminent threat if a current health care proposal is allowed to go unchallenged. This month, the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) is planning to override Congress and effectively lower the amount that doctors are reimbursed for chemotherapy drugs needed to treat elderly patients on Medicare. This means that physicians will no longer have adequate resources to provide chemotherapy in their offices, and that patients will be shifted to hospital care, resulting in one less choice for patients.

Not only would this change ultimately be more expensive for Medicare, but it would be much less desirable for patients who may have to travel longer distances, wait for longer periods of time, and receive less personal attention for their cancer care.

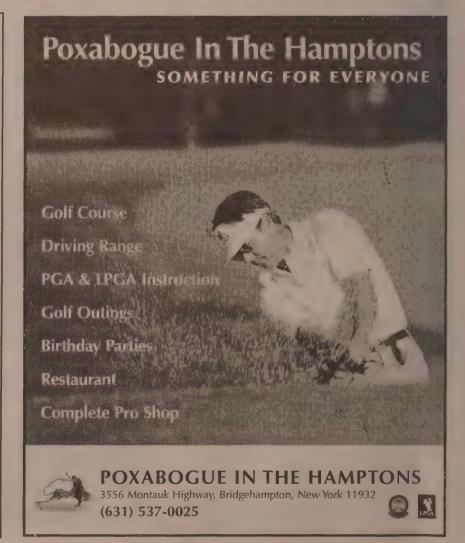

Unless HCFA, Congressional Representatives and the Administration hear from you, this ill-advised proposal will move forward. This issue is of the utmost urgency and requires immediate action as HCFA could issue a program memorandum advising insurers to reduce reimbursement for cancer therapy at any time. Once HCFA issues the memorandum, carriers will implement the revised reimbursement policy in their fee schedule updates on October 1, 2000. Physicians and patients would be affected immediately.

East End Hematology Oncology encourages everyone interested in preserving quality cancer care to contact their member of Congress and encourage them to speak out against this proposal. To contact your Congressional representatives, please visit http://congress.nw.dc.us/asco/. This part of the American Society of Clinical Oncologist's (ASCO) website provides names, addresses, phone/fax numbers and e-mail addresses for members of Congress. It also provides a suggested form letter that can be edited and personalized. East End Hematology Oncology will also gladly provide sample letters upon request.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

The state legislature literally must compress one year's work into a legislative session that technically lasts from January to June, and I'd like to thank our state representatives for their work on our behalf. I thought this would be a good time to give you an update on the results of this past session. The following is a summary of an article in New York Farm Bureau's The Voice by Julie Suarez, State Issues Coordinator.

Without a doubt, the biggest success for farmers this year was achieving farm sales tax reform in the 2000-2001 state budget. This estimated $12 million a year savings for farmers has been a priority of New York

Farm Bureau one way or another since the state sales tax was enacted in the mid-1960s. We have made some headway over the years in exempting various production items from the state sales tax, such as diesel fuel and fencing materials. Now, finally, all items used directly in farm production will be tax-exempt beginning September 1, 2000 with a farmer's certificate of exemption.

This year's budget was an excellent example of election year politics – just about every interest group in New York, from education to agriculture, received increased funding or some kind of tax exemptions.

Farmers on Long Island (and in the state) were fortunate to have two energetic and enthusiastic advocates for agriculture during the state budget process: Senator Nancy Larraine Hoffmann, Chair of the Senate Agriculture Committee; and Assemblyman William Magee, Chair of the Assembly Agriculture Committee.

Several other programs, both existing and new, received funding that will aid specific sectors of the agricultural industry. Two new additions to the state budget – a $200,000 appropriation for new equipment pests in check by providing natural enemies, the ones known to us as beneficial insects. But few fully appreciate the vast number of potentially beneficial insects that inhabit the land around us. It's not only the handful we read about so frequently, but dozens, perhaps hundreds of kinds of insects. Some look like flies, some are smaller than a pinhead. Some come out only at night and others rove through the rubble on the ground searching out eggs and larvae

You'll find many of the beneficial insects native to our region in Mother Nature's meadow, especially if

Nature keeps the populations of the insects we call the meadow is a complex landscape including the edge of a woods, a running brook, etc. By comparison, how many of those insects are stalking in your garden? If you're growing strictly corn, beans and tomatoes in the midst of an acre or two of close cropped grass, it will be only a few. If you have a multitude of flowers, dwarf fruit trees and shrubs, and herbs along with your vegetables, like we do here at Spring Meadow, you certainly will have more. The number will increase directly with the diversity of the planting you have

The mere presence of pests like aphids isn't enough to lure a range of predators to your garden and keep them there. Beneficial insects need more, they need their favored places to breed and most need other sources of food. For example, the huge family of minuscule wasps that parasitize several kinds of pests, from aphids to Mexican bean beetles. The adults lay eggs on the body of the pest and when the larvae hatches it consumes its host. The egg laying adults need nectar for food to continue breeding, producing those valuable eggs and for seeking out the pests. They need other plants for rest and shelter. All these other essentials may be provided by trees, flowers, herbs, and even the so called lowly weeds.

There are a number of theories as to why the presence of weeds has such an effect on injurious insect populations. In addition to providing homes for beneficial insects, weeds produce odors that confuse or repel injurious pests. Their smell may also attract the beneficials. Weeds also serve as home for neutral insects, which can serve as alternate food for some predators.

Letting selected weeds grow in certain places can help to create a better ecological balance. For example, most of us are temped to pull up Goldenrod as soon as it shows itself. But goldenrod supports more than seventy five species of beneficial insects. Over thirty beneficial insects call the common pigweed home.

Planting herbs in and around the garden can also help control injurious insects.

Mint, for example, helps to repel cabbage butterflies, ants, black fleas and aphids. Rue, savory, basil, sage, lavender, thyme, garlic and tansy also repel many Injurious insects. Most of these have flowers that are potentially valuable nectar sources for beneficials, too.

Intercropping your vegetables will hamper pests. Injurious insects tend to spread more easily and remain longer when crops are grown in pure stands. So alternate the rows of vegetables, making sure that one crop doesn't shade another.

Your garden's location can also be a factor in insect control, by what's known as the edge effect. That is, the numbers of benefical insects are higher around the edges of these diverse environments. Tall weeds, trees and shrubs may also prevent some injurious insects from being blown into the garden by the wind.

When we grow our highly domesticated vegetables in neat, weed free rows, we are ignoring Nature's model, in essence inviting injurious insects and diseases to run epidemic in our farms and gardens.

The keys to this approach are observation and experimentation. Look at Nature around you, and see what you can learn about the mixes of plants that thrive on their own and the societies of insects that operate among them.

and personnel at the Seed Testing Lab in Geneva, and a $200,000 appropriation to reinstate a much needed Apiary Inspection Program — will benefit vegetable growers and beekeepers. The New York Apple Association received additional funding to promote New York's apples, and the Wine and Grape Foundation received a slight increase in funding to promote New York's growing wine industry.

Governor Pataki's initiative to establish a new program at the Department of Agriculture and Markets entitled "Grow New York" will benefit the industry across the board. This program, approved by the legislature through the efforts of the Joint Legislative Commission on Rural Resources, will help fund research and development projects to keep New York's agricultural industry moving forward. As part of the Grow New York program, the Department will focus its energies on creating a vibrant state agricultural marketing program that will enhance the existing Pride of New York campaign. These efforts will help our farmers compete with other state programs, such as Jersey Fresh and Made in Vermont. In addition, the state budget included monies for the Farmland Viability Program, which will help farmers plan for the future of their farm operation.

As you might guess, environmental issues were at the forefront of this year's legislative session. Pesticide neighbor notification was adopted this year as a result of significant pressure from environmental and consumer activists. This legislation requires homeowners to notify their neighbors in advance of a pesticide application, and schools to notify parents who want to be informed of school applications. Agriculture, golf courses, cemeteries, and some granular applications are exempt, at least for now

We were successful in working with other concerned business groups to defeat the enactment of so-called "citizen suit" legislation, which would essentially allow anyone to sue a farm or any other business if they perceive that there is an environmental law violation occurring. The Agricultural Environmental Management program, a voluntary program in which farmers throughout the state have been participating, was enacted into statute and expanded this year. In order to recognize and protect the work of soil and water conservation district employees on farms and elsewhere, legislation was also passed this year to provide for state indemnification of district employees when providing technical assistance to farmers and others at the request of the state.

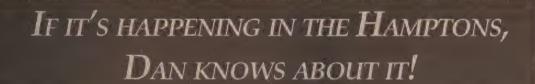

The labor issue was by far the most controversial topic at the state level this year and many of our members participated in Senate Majority hearings on this topic. State representatives were very anxious to "solve" this complex problem before the November elections. At the end of the session, the New York Farm Bureau Governmental Relations Department relied heavily on our grassroots network of farmers to call their state representatives on the labor issues. We were facing three different Senate Majority proposals, one of which required overtime payments, as well as a proposal to increase the minimum wage to $6.75 an hour, along with automatic increases every year. No new labor requirements were passed at the state level this year; however, this issue will require constant monitoring and education of our state representatives.

Farm Bureau depends heavily on its grassroots structure to keep agricultural issues moving forward. This state can be contradictory in terms of its agricultural policy. On the one hand, all state legislators agree that farming is important, not just for economic development, but also for the preservation and maintenance of open space and wildlife habitat for all citizens. This idealized vision of the small family farm, however, conflicts with today's farm economics and creates a greater need for the state to rationally address the many challenges facing agriculture. Whether large or small, growing for a direct or wholesale market, livestock or produce, all of agriculture needs to continue to educate and work with our state and federal representatives. Due to a constant presence in the state legislature, and the ongoing commitment of our members to make their voices heard, farmers can thank their state representatives for all of our hard earned achievements this year.

On another note, I am pleased to announce that we have a new addition to LIFB – Rebecca Wiseman has joined our staff as associate director. Becky will be assisting me in the development and execution of county and local issues and activities. She will also assist individual LIFB members, government officials and staff, government agencies, agricultural organizations and media with technical inquiries and serve as liaison between LIFB and County and Town governments and to functioning Agricultural Advisory Committees. Her education, her experience and her understanding of the goals and obstacles confronting agriculture make her uniquely qualified to serve the farming industry. Stay tuned!

Joseph Gergela III is Executive Director of Long Island Farm Bureau

POLICE BLOTTER

A parking lot attendant at Mecox Beach on Ocean Road in Bridgehampton received a phone call at work. The caller identified himself as a "nude lifeguard," and invited said parking lot attendant to join him in his hot tub. Police are looking for a naked guy with a whistle.

An East Hampton man reported to police that another man had followed his car from Church Lane to Accabonac Road. The second man then smashed the rear window out of the first man's 1989 Oldsmobile with a crowbar. The crowbar wielder was apparently not pleased with the speed that the Oldsmobile had been traveling on "his road." No charges were filed.

In Hampton Bays, a 19-year-old man was driving behind a restaurant at night, when another man approached him swinging a large thing. Instead of leaving, the brazen youth got out of his car and chased the other man. The large thing turned out to be a machete, which was then used to hit the teenager in the forehead. The teen continued to fight with the knife swinger and told police that he managed to get a few good blows in before the night stalker fled.

On Further Lane in East Hampton, James Hren had a chain blocking the entrance to his property, apparently to keep out thieves and trespassers. Somebody stole his chain.

In another sign of the ever eastward creeping of the city, a school bus at the East Hampton Day Care Center was vandalized by graffiti "artists." The criminals used red, black, and gray spray paint to perpetrate the crime. They also decorated a ticket machine at a nearby parking lot.

In a less destructive act, some children wrote "Rick is a jerk" on the wall of Rick's Crabby Cowboy Café on East Lake Drive in Montauk, with some water pistols. Rick, the proprietor, then yelled at the kids, annoying one of the pistol packer's mothers, who called the police.

In Springs, another creative vandal used the lifeguard chair at the Clearwater Beach pavilion as a ladder to gain roof access. The unauthorized roofer tore off some shingles and left them in the sand.

A flag filcher has been stalking Montauk. The Atlantic Terrace Motel reported the theft of a Montauk flag and a millennium flag from the flagpole. Also on the same day, the Montauk Chamber of Commerce's flagpole was stripped of its Montauk flag, Millennium flag and an American flag.

A man was travelling north in Route 114 in North Haven when the Shelter Island ferry terminal was suddenly behind him. Sean McGayhey, 30, who lives on Shelter Island, drove through the gates at the South Ferry and into the water. His pickup truck quickly sank in the twelve feet of water, but McGayhey was able to escape. The Sag Harbor Fire Department sent divers down to make sure there were no other passengers, and a crane was brought in to remove the sunken truck. McGayhey was charged with DWI.

There has not been a public urinator in these pages for a while, so not wanting to disappoint, a 23-year-old man was arrested at Neptune's Beach Club on Dune Road for urinating in public. Continuing with the fun, he also had in his possession a glass vial of Ketamine, a controlled substance, and some cocaine and marijuana were found in his car.

Dan's LETTERS

LIGHTEN UP

Dear Dan,

"Lighten up" a bit is my advice to the person who wrote about the Shelter Islander column. I have spent the past twenty five years vacationing on Shelter Island and look forward to this column every week.

The article on the "Land Cruisers" which talked about boats parked on front lawns and in driveways was very funny. It described how people don't need to worry about ice or the "Head" on their boats because of the close proximity to their kitchens and bathrooms. To tell you the truth, I hadn't noticed this situation until I read about it in the column. What better way to bring attention to a local problem than through humor?

In a newspaper which features the rich and famous of the East End, it is refreshing to have a column which talks about the every day lives of year round residents. Articles about the Post Office, clamming and the beaches focus on daily living on Shelter Island. Many of the year round residents of Shelter Island work on and off the island to help build and maintain the beautiful homes on the East End. It's good to see this invisible group represented in the paper.

So what if people think that Shelter Islanders are hicks. Maybe this is the best way to protect the island from becoming overrun with visitors, maintain its serenity and to keep the beauty and unspoiled charm of the island a secret.

Relax and laugh a little.

Jean Grenning Shelter Island

SANITY IN THE HAMPTONS Dear Dan,

For at least the last thirty years or so, I have been visiting the East End. Last weekend, I visited some old friends (very rich, but quietly so) who live in East Hampton. As is my practice, I picked up a copy of your publication and read your piece, "Excessive Excess And You." It was a dandy!

Since I wear another hat as chairman of the Nassau County Planning Commision, I was especially interested in your commentary. I think East Hampton Supervisor Jay Schneiderman is doing a good job in trying to prevent runaway development in his town. "Keep sanity in the Hamptons" indeed.

Harold Blankman Garden City

POLITICAL IDEOLOGY Dear Dan,

Congratulation on your fortieth year of being the unique, informative, humorous and satirical voice of the Hamptons.

Is it just my paranoia, or has your weekly taken on a decided political bent with much of the writing seeming to come out of the Democratic National Committee. Since the majority of regular folks in our little corner of the world have demonstrated a more conservative outlook on things political you might consider a more balanced point of view in your writing and that of your guest columnists.

It was sad to see that you found it necessary to resurrect that tired old cliché about the Republican/Democrat/Woman with flat tire in your Platitudes article of August 18, 2000. A more realistic current scenario would have the Republicans stop to fix the "persons" tire and encourage them to watch and learn so as to to able to assist themselves and others in the future; the Democrat, on the way to a $5000 a plate wine and brie fundraiser at the Hampton home of (fill in the usual South of the Highway suspects) might stop to give our driver the telephone number of a new government agency that may provide assistance with this problem.

Again, keep up the good work. Our differences are not with the ends but with some of the means and the debate keeps things vital and interesting.

Dan, there is also no need to worry since many others have been seduced by the Bill and Hill show, and with time your infection will ease and clarity will return.

Alan Gilman Southampton

THANKS DAN FOR YOUR SUPPORT Dear Dan,

Thank you so much for sponsoring the Dan's Papers Giant Steps Run Walk on August 6 at the Hayground School for the third year. There was a wonderful spirit of community at the event and everyone had a great time socializing afterwards at the brunch. Linda Shaprio does such a wonderful job for us every year.

Marla W. Schwenk American Cancer Society Southampton

NUNS THE WORD Dear Dan,

Thanks to an ad in Dan's Papers, we four Dominican nuns vacationing at Siena Center in Water Mill, had a marvelous time on August 22 on the Atlantic Explorer Tour boat at the new Riverhead Aquarium. We learned many wonderful things about the ecology of the Peconic River.

Candace, our really savvy and enthusiastic lecturer, soon had all of us, adults and kids, bravely handling freshly caught marine life. We won't forget touching a live big horseshow crab and other species as Candace told us many things often humorouls, about these water creatures.

Cheers for Riverhead's planners and staff for giving us this treat and to Dan's Papers for informing us about it.

is common knowledge that this newspaper often takes an advocacy position on issues, but not until both sides are heard from and a position determined. In this case, our reporter only interviewed one of the neighbors.

Herewith is the position of the other neighbor. However, since he is ninety-three years old, and not in the best of health, his position was presented by his son-in-law, Joe Romanowsky, a school teacher who is also serving a term as Mayor of the Village.

"My father-in-law has lived on North Main Street for more than fifty years," he told us. "His property was once part of a large working farm owned by the Halsey family, but it hasn't been operational as a farm since about 1920. In the interim the farm has been broken up into residential lots - this is a short walk into the middle of downtown Southampton - and the farmhouse which still stands is only on two acres that are adjacent to where my father-in-law lives. Two years ago, in Gines Serran-Pagan, a painter and a native of a small town in southern Spain, bought the property and moved in there with his ten year old son. He restored some of the barns and has brought in all manner of farm animals. He's apparently of the belief that he should show his son how he grew up as a child in his homeland."

According to Mr. Pagan who was interviewed by our reporter, the only person in the area objecting to this was Alex Gadomski, Mr. Romanowsky's father-in-law. Two chickens walked into Mr. Gadomski's yard, and in front of a friend of his sons', Gadonski threatened to shoot them with a pellet gun. He's gotten Mr. Romanowsky, the Mayor, to serve Pagan a summons for operating an illegal farm in a residential area, when in fact, Mr. Pagan is really running little more than a petting zoo. The matter is in court, he said, and yet everyday the police serve him an additional violation for running a farm, the fine being $250 for each ticket, each day. But, everyone loves the farm animals and by arrangement with the teachers of various schools, classes of school children come over and meet the goats and turkeys and rabbits and ducks and chickens that Mr. Pagan has on the premises.

"Tve been to Mr. Pagan's house when the children have been taken through." Mr. Romanowsky said. "And I think it's a fine thing, but it's in the wrong place. This is a street that has private homes on it and it's true that some people don't mind it, but that's probably because those are homeowners who have central air conditioning and can keep the windows closed. As for the others, I've had more than a half dozen of the adjacent neighbors filing complaints because of the constant noise and smell. The situation is also unsanitary. When it rains the manure from the animals washes down the driveway into the street. Mr. Pagan is not the only person with rights."

Mr. Romanowsky described numerous occasions where animals from the farm had wound up in other parts of town. There were ducks found on Willow Street, Guinea hens walking on Layton Avenue, there were even reports of Mr. Pagan's animals wandering around at John Duck's restaurant on North Main Street.

"By rights they should have been ducks," I said.

"All of these things have been reported to us as complaints from people in the neighborhood, "Mr. Romanowsky said. "We had one woman report that her dogs has dispatched a whole bunch of Mr. Pagan's chickens and there was blood all over her garage."

Mr. Pagan had told our reporter that almost every day a police officer or an ordinance enforcement officer appears and that the presence of these individuals frightens his son. He also said that these officers sometimes apologize for having to come over.

"The truth is," Mr. Romanowsky said, "that we've explained to Mr. Pagan that every day we get a complaint, we are required by law to go over there and look into it. We apologize because we would rather not have to do so. As for the tickets we've supposedly written to him at $250 a day for the last six months, there have been exactly four of them. And, it's like if your neighbor plays the music too loud, you give him a ticket one day and if he does it the next day you ticket him again."

Dan's Papers apologizes to Mr. Gadomski and to Mr. Romanowsky for not having solicited their comments before this time. The whole matter is still in court. It is our opinion that somewhere in there, between a thousand mooing cows (illegal) and one pet chicken (legal) there is a compromise. A judge will soon make this Solomon-like decision.

KIDS & TOBACCO

Kids should not smoke. Nor should they have access to tobacco products. We believe there is broad agreement on this important issue.

At Philip Morris USA, we are committed to dealing responsibly with the complex problem of underage smoking. There is no single, easy answer to this issue. Many experts suggest the best way to address underage smoking is through broad-based, integrated approaches that include communications, education, community involvement and access prevention.

As part of our commitment to play a role in reducing underage smoking, we have created a Youth Smoking Prevention Department whose sole purpose is to develop and support programs to help reduce the incidence of youth smoking. We've dedicated significant resources—over $100 million last year—toward initiatives based on the key components listed above. We are spending another $100 million against these initiatives in 2000.

Our effort includes support for schoolbased programs, one of which has been recognized for prevention excellence by the National Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and other national organizations. We're also running national advertising campaigns: one that encourages kids not to smoke, and one that urges parents to talk to their kids about not smoking.

To help prevent minors' access to tobacco products, we support and help fund the Coalition for Responsible Tobacco Retailing's nationwide "We Card" retailer education and training program. This effort has helped train over 500,000 retail store employees to reject attempted purchases by minors.

Working to help prevent youth smoking is important and it's the right thing to do for our company and for our employees. It's also the right thing to do on behalf of our shareholders and our adult customers. Everyone has a stake in solving the problem of underage smoking. At Philip Morris USA, we are working to help find answers.

For more information about our youth smoking prevention efforts, visit our Web site at www.philipmorrisusa.com. If you don't have Internet access, please call 1-877-PMUSAWEB.
